Hitler Shuns Politics, Asks Peace as Aim Of DeadChief

Reassurances of Policy Omitted at Rites for Hindenburg.

National Funeral Is Set for Today

Charge of German War Guilt Denied in Eulogy by Chancellor.

Berlin, Aug. 6 (AP).—The German people were called upon today by Chancellor Hitler to follow the patriotic spirit of Paul von Hindenburg in death as they followed and idolized the man in life.

Speaking at a memorial service before the German Reichstag, the man who assumed the powers of the dead President declared that "honestly and with his whole heart," the old warrior desired peace for his people.

This brief reference to the future was the only portion of the speech which in any way touched upon Hitler's policies as sole ruler of the nation, now that Von Hindenburg's hand is stilled.

The political discussion, which some expected Hitler would enter into as a reassurance of the world, was omitted from the speech.

To Speak Again at Funeral.

Hitler left late in the afternoon for Tannenberg in East Prussia, where tomorrow he will speak again at the national funeral for the President.

Whether he will again confine himself to phrases of the dead man's career was not known, the possibility existing that he might speak of his future course in government.

"As fate has designated us to continue to lead the Reich, and the people," Hitler said today, "we can only pray to Almighty God that He may vouchsafe success in our labors and struggles for the happiness of the world.

"May He also give us strength at all times to stake our lives for the freedom of our people and the honor of the German nation.

Wanted Peace, He Says.

"May He especially, in His mercy, let us find the right way for securing the boon of peace for our people, to shelter it from the misfortune of war, just as the deceased one ever wanted it, honestly and with his whole heart.

"Deputies of the German Reichstag, men and women of the German people:

"In this consecrated hour I implore you now to look beyond this transient moment into the future.

"Let the strong reolization enter our hearts.

Extra Motor Dividend Paid

$20,000,000 Is Passed on to Stockholders of General Motors.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today cut a melon for stockholders of more than $20,000,000 in the form of a 50-cents-a-share extra dividend.

Alfred P. Sloane, jr., president, said among considerations motivating the payment was that this sum "passing into the channels of active trade, will act as a worth-while stimulant to business in general."

This is the second of the fruits of recovery for the owners of the approximately 43,500,000 common shares, the first having been a 25-cents-a-share disbursement last December.

Shareholders, however, still see their regular annual disbursements maintained at the depression low of $1, since directors today ordered another regular quarterly disbursement of only 25 cents.

The 50-cent extra, however, is the largest extra since 1929, when 60 cents a share was ordered in addition to the regular payments at the rate of $3 a share annually then prevailing.

RFC Lends Chicago School Wage Fund

$22,500,000 at 4½% to Pay Teachers.

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, late today announced authorization of a $22,500,000 loan by the RFC to the Chicago School Board for full payment of teachers' salaries.

The loan will finance seven months' salary payments to June 1, 1934.

"While the bonds which the RFC will take for this loan have heretofore been authorized by the school board and city officials at 5 per cent interest," Jones said, "I find the finances of the city of Chicago and the board of education to be in such improved condition as to warrant a lower interest rate, and accordingly, we are authorizing this loan at 4½ per cent."

Hindenburg's Body Started On Last March

Tannenburg Hero Travels Flowered Road After Family Service.

En Route to Tannenberg, East Prussia, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—The body of President Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg started at 8:30 p. m. moving through a flower-garlanded highway toward its final resting place at Tannenberg War Memorial.

Intimate family services were held at 8:15 p. m. at the estate at Neudeck, where the body of the aged soldier had lain in state since last Thursday. They were attended by Col. Oskar von Hindenburg, the President's son, retainers and high government dignitaries.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier, left Berlin by airplane to participate in the funeral services at Tannenberg; the services here were confined to immediate members of the family.

Army Honor Guard.

Following the brief family services, the oaken casket was borne down the front steps. Reichswehr officers composed the guard of honor outside. Chaplain D. Schlegel again blessed the casket as two officers stood at attention.

The honor company of the Second Battalion of Deutsche Eylau, the last unit reviewed by Von Hindenburg, stood stiffly at attention as the casket was placed on a caisson.

The Reichswehr troops were drawn up in parade formation. They included two battalions of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry and one artillery battery. The infantry and cavalry bands successively sounded taps, the notes floating clear, over the heads of tens of

Hot Weather Puts Last White House Dog in Hospital

About two weeks ago, Winks, a setter puppy owned by President Roosevelt, was overcome and crashed fatally into a fence. Since then attendants have been keeping a close watch on Wink's playful companion.

Pal, an English bull terrier, the property of Gus Gennerich, the President's personal attendant, began acting "queerly," according to attendants, some days ago, and a veterinarian was called.

The terrier was admitted to the D. E. Buckinghams Hospital and a good rest was ordered. Hospital attendants say the dog will be able to greet its master on his return Friday with Mr. Roosevelt.

2,000 Agents Added in War On Illicit Rum

U. S. Dry Staff at All Time High as Battle to End Is Opened.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday deployed his alcoholic forces for a new offensive against illicit liquor, ordered almost 2,000 more agents to join the fray, and then declared, "If the bootleggers lick me at this job I'll admit it and go home."

Dividing the Nation into 15 enforcement zones, he announced the final set-up of an Administrative plan under which the present alcohol tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, with 3,291 men, will be increased to 5,000—an all-time high for dry agents.

"If the United States Government," he asserted, "can't enforce its own laws, I'll feel pretty sick about it. No, I'm not going home; I feel very far from being licked."

In his overhauling of the alcohol tax unit the Treasury Secretary split up the East to create three more districts, transferred supervisors and assistants right and left and went over the entire personnel "with a fine-toothed comb." From now on, he said, it would be "a fight to the finish."

"First Honest Effort."

"Some people have been kind enough to say this is the first honest effort we've had to eliminate the bootlegger," he replied to questions. "I'm perfectly content to stand by the figures."

In charge of what Mr. Morgenthau cheerfully projected as the greatest drive against bootlegging ever conducted will be Arthur J. Mellott, solt-spoken Kansas City

Storm Again Slows Byrd Rescue Party

Food Slips Into Crevasse But Is Recovered.

Little America, Antarctica, Aug. 6 (Via Mackay Radio) (U.P.).—Dr. Thomas C. Poulter reported today that he and his tractor crew of two men again were southward-bound, after a mild blizzard, to relieve Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

The storm added to the party's difficulties. The only known safe passage for the tractor through crevasses and pressure ridges on the ice, traversing Amundsen Arm, could not be located and the party was forced to cruise in various directions looking for the old trail. Before they could locate it or find a new transit, the vague gray light of the forenoon dissolved and darkness closed in again.

The sled carrying the party's rations slid into a deep crevasse 6 feet wide and 30 feet deep, and it took all three men most of yesterday afternoon to dig it out.

Long, Fleming Vanish on Eve Of Court Test

New Orleans Sends Police Detail to Aid Militia Against Reds.

New Orleans, Aug. 6 (AP).—Under the muzzles of machine guns, several hundred Communists and Socialists, claiming to voice the sentiment of "the masses," today demonstrated aganist both Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley. They condemned expenditure of public funds for military display.

The demonstration was held just across the street from city hall, where Mayor Walmsley had installed hundreds of heavily armed police, and from city hall annex, where Senator Long's steel-helmeted National Guardsmen are encamped.

Police swarmed over the area and laughter swept the packed spectators when the city stationed a police sub-machine gun squad around the area, apparently to protect their political antagonists, the militiamen, from the demonstrators.

At the same time the Long and Walmsley forces came to grips in a courtroom in a series of legal actions.

The court took under advisement the question of whether police power in New Orleans shall continue in the hands of the mayor or be transferred to a public board decreed by the recent Long-controlled Legislature.

Tomorrow the same court has summoned both Senator Long and Adjt. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming to answer for calling out troops in a political fuss. Both Long and Fleming had dropped out of sight today and their associates professed to have no knowledge of their whereabouts.

A court order for demobilization of the Guard was served on Long several days ago, but Fleming has evaded service.

The troops meantime have remained on duty, garrisoned in the

Grains Soar To New Highs

Chicago, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Grain prices soared to new high levels for the season today, while a crop-destroying heat wave settled over the drought-cracked prairies of the West and Southwest.

Mad confusion ruled over the Chicago Board of Trade as the world flocked to the pits to buy grains. All future options of the five major grains—wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley—edged to seasonal high marks.

At the maximum advance, wheat was more than 33 cents a bushel above the year's low, corn was nearly 30 cents higher, oats 23 cents, rye 32 cents and barley 29 cents above the bottom touched earlier in the year.

Wheat, sold for September delivery, commanded a premium of $1.08⅜ at the extreme, while the May contract brought top of $1.13½. May corn was as high as 82¾ cents a bushel, and May oats reached 53½ cents, May rye 90½ cents and May barley 69 cents a bushel.

The situation in the great corn belt caused grave concern. One expert estimated deterioration reduced prospects by at least 15,000,000 bushels daily. With pastures barren, seared by unprecedented drought and heat, farmers were forced to scoop into their storage bins to feed starving live stock. The supply in store, it was estimated, is cut by 300,000,000 bushels each month.

Activity around the pits was pitched to feverish heights as America today became grain-minded.

Trade was especially impressed by the foreign demand for holdings. Commission houses with foreign connections led a nervous attack, waving orders and willing to pay a premium for options.

Friends Save Prince's Widow, Once Rich, From Potter's Field

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Two friends averted a potter's field burial today for Mrs. Katherine Rigo Gordon, 55, widow of Prince Rigo, famous gypsy violinist, with whom she once toured Europe, accompanied by 40 servants.

For nearly a day after her death the body lay unclaimed in a hospital. Then Frank Parish, an acrobat, and Mary Davis, both of New York, arranged to have the remains taken to a funeral chapel.

Taken to a hospital charity ward from her squalid tenement rooms, Mrs. Gordon died Sunday, penniless and alone. Nothing remained of the fortune which had enabled her to achieve a colorful, glamorous life on two continents.

Mrs. Gordon came to this country as a young girl from her native Hungary. She was only 17 when she was first married—to Casper Emerson, wealthy and socially prominent Philadelphian. They went to Europe and there met Prince Rigo.

The violinist was then the husband of Clara Ward, noted beauty and a Detroit heiress. She had deserted her husband, Prince de Chimay, to roam the world with Rigo.

The gypsy musician and Mrs. Emerson fell in love and, after the Ward fortune had been squandered, were married.

A new era of lavish living opened. Rigo's prodigious earnings were spent with ease. Then the violinist never regarded as a masterful musician but drawing huge crowds through his colorful personality, began to slip. In 1927 he died, leaving his widow penniless.

Two years later she married Edward Gordon, former Lieutenant Governor of Florida, and they moved to a baronial mansion overlooking the Hudson River. The depression swept away the Gordon fortune and he died.

Mrs. Gordon finally was evicted by a foreclosure on the Spuyten Dyvil Chauteau and drifted from one tenement to another. When she died, an oil painting of Clara Ward and an old violin, neither worth much, were her only possessions.

Eight Killed, Ten Missing In Mine Blast

Rescuers Dig Toward Trapped Men in Virginia.

2 Victims Found Alive; 80 Others Fight Way Out.

Derby, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—Hope for miners still entrapped in the No. 3 mine of the Stonage Coke & Coal Co. faded this afternoon after rescue workers had brought out two men alive and eight dead.

Exactly how many men were in the part of the mine affected by an explosion at 7 a. m. today had not been determined but it was believed that from seven to ten remained. Between 70 and 80 men working in other sections of the mine escaped through an abandoned entry.

Progress toward the entombed men was slow because of the necessity of forcing in fresh air and expelling poisonous monoxide fumes before rescue parties could advance.

Escape Difficult.

The two living and eight dead men were found in a main corridor about 400 feet from the mine entrance. The men still missing were working in a gallery approximately 1,000 feet from this point. It was believed the explosion occurred in this vicinity.

The workers who escaped had to walk 2,000 feet under a low roof and plunge through water three feet deep in places.

A body at first identified as that of Ben Jinkins later was identified under another name. Jinkins was missing. Those brought out alive were Lawrence Flenner and Walter Bayless.

It was feared that those still in the mine might be badly burned or mutilated by the explosion and that identification would be difficult.

Relatives Stoical.

Relatives and fellow workers of the dead or missing men were almost stoical in the face of the worst calamity in the Virginia mining field in recent years.

Women and children crowded porches and yards, quietly awaiting the news they feared to hear.

Two men, Fred Sloan and Henry Bowers, were outside and just in front of the drift mouth when the explosion occurred. They were blown 75 to 100 feet, but escaped injury.

Sloan had a pocket full of dynamite caps and a cache of powder, but these almost miraculously escaped being exploded.

Bramer Tucker fell under influence of the deadly gas while in the mine, but was picked up by Homer Rutherford, motorman, and carried to safety through the low passage, partly filled with water.

Spectator Killed When Bull Tosses Matador's Sword

Coruna, Spain, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—A spectator was killed at a bullfight today when a sword, tossed by a maddened bull, swished through the air and penetrated his heart.

The victim, Candido Roig Roura, was sitting in the fifth row in the grandstand, watching Juan Belmonte, famous matador, and a furious animal in the pit.

New York College Head Ships as Able Seaman

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, president of the College of the City of New York, returned from Europe today and disclosed that he had made the eastbound trip a member of the crew of the Tela, a Norwegian freighter, to learn what sort of life a sailor has.

Dr. Robinson said it was the happiest 16 days he ever spent and expressed surprise that anyone was interested in a college president turning seaman.

Widow Held in Killing Of Attorney in Texas

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 6 (AP).—A murder complaint was filed today against Mrs. Gladys Rice, a 40-year-old widow, shortly after Ben H. Kelly, 64-year-old attorney, had died from pistol wounds received at a busy street intersection.

Police said they took a smoking pistol from her hand immediately after the shooting and quoted her as saying financial affairs led to the slaying. She said she was a seamstress.

Mounting Drought Toll Viewed by President; He Pledges Safeguards

Shoemaker Ordered Jailed in Minneapolis

Police Told to Pick Up Representative for 30-Day Term.

Minneapolis, Aug. 6 (AP).—Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, who a month ago paid a $50 fine on a disorderly conduct charge, today was sought by police to serve a 30-day workhouse sentence on a traffic charge.

The Representative who has so often found himself in difficulty with the law could not be found, however. His hotel said he was to have returned from Brainerd in northern Minnesota, but up to a late hour today he had not been located.

He was sought on a bench warrant and a commitment order issued by Judge F. B. Wright, who ordered the Congressman picked up to begin serving a 30-day workhouse sentence when he did not appear in court.

The alleged offense, a failure to stop after an accident, occurred May 5. On May 31 Shoemaker was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $75 or serve 30 days in the workhouse. A third continuance, granted at the Representative's request, expired today.

The disorderly conduct fine was

Marial Law Declared in Algeria as Savage Fighting Rages.

Constantine, Algeria, Aug. 6 (AP).—Authorities estimated that at least 100 persons were massacred in Constantine alone after savage fighting broke out anew late today in the religious war between Arabs and Jews.

Martial law was declared tonight and Senegalese troops were attempting to restore order to Constantine and the nearby port of Philippeville.

Special trains were bringing all available colonial troops into the city. Machine guns were set up at strategic spots throughout the Jewish quarter, and patrols of soldiers were marching through the principal streets.

Military authorities ordered that all traffic cease, and cafes were closed.

All the members of two Jewish families were reported to have been killed, women and children being among the victims. Witnesses said afterwards their bodies were mutilated.

Shots from a Jewish home caused the battle to flare anew after authorities thought calm had been restored.

The Arabs retaliated by setting fire to five buildings and putting to death a number of Jews.

Strict censoship by French authorities, who feared the fighting would spread to other parts of Algeria, prevented disclsoure of full details.

Killings also were reported at Hamma, Jemmapes and Bizet.

N. J. Livestock Men Strike.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 6 (AP).—Demanding increased wages and shorter hours, livestock handlers in the Jersey City stockyards went out on strike today.

About 8,000 head of cattle in the yard were being cared for by other employes.

Labor Wars Hurt New Deal In Wisconsin

Leaders Are Pessimistic of Future and Hostile Toward NIRA.

By Elliott Thurston.

Milwaukee, Aug. 6.—The New Deal is reaping a whirlwind of labor troubles in Wisconsin.

Leading business men and bankers here are deeply pessimistic. They reflect all the fears of the future found among their contemporaries elsewhere. But to these inhibitions upon the resumption of private enterprise is added the more immediate, overshadowing fear that the New Deal has unleashed dangerous, largely emotional forces which it can not manage.

Many thoughtful men here think they see in the series of labor outbreaks, climaxed by the strike at the Kohler plant, the beginning of the overthrow of private industrial ownership, management and enterprise in this country. They blame the NRA, specifically Section 7 (a) as Washington has permitted labor leaders—or agitators—to construe it.

Kohler Strike.

For it is clear, in the Kohler strike, that the American Federation of Labor takes it for granted—and Washington has yet to dispute it—that Section 7 (a) is a grant, a charter, permitting A. F. of L. organizers, and only A. F. of L. organizers, an exclusive legal right to bargain and speak for the workers. The issue at the Kohler plant is not the principle of collective bargaining. It is recognition of the A. F. of L. as the spokesman for the employes. The strike in this plant

Court Rules D. C. Fathers Must Care for Daughters Until 21

The District Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that girls do not attain their majority in the District until they become 21 years old.

The court was called upon to pass on the question when Mrs. Bertie P. Jones asked a review of a decision of the District Supreme Court that had exonerated her husband, William R. Jones, of contempt of court for his refusal to pay her $55 a month for the support of an 18-year-old daughter, Doris Jones.

The District Supreme Court had ordered the payment when the girl was 17 years and 9 months old. When she became 18 the father declined to continue the payments, and his wife, who had obtained an absolute divorce, asked that he be required to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt.

The lower court decided that Mr. Jones was not responsible for his daughter's support after she became 18 years old, but the appellate court said: "We think the lower court erred in holding that under the laws of the District the infant daughter attained her majority when she reached the age of 18 years. It is conceded that under the common law infants, whether male or female, attained their majority at the age of 21 years.

"It is also conceded that the Legislature may regulate the age of majority for infants in all cases, or for specified purposes only. The question to be determined, therefore, is whether or not in this jurisdiction the common-law rule requiring the father to support a female child until she attains the age of 21 years has been changed by statute.

"We find no statute in force in the District of Columbia which clearly provides that female infants shall as a general rule attain their majority at the age of 18 years. It is true that exceptions to the common-law rule have been provided by statute; these, however, recognize the existence of the general rule of the common law."

Rides Over Miles of Scorched Land in Montana.

Told of Need for Even More Relief

Program for Moving Farmers to Better Lands Pushed.

By Raymond Clapper.

Aboard Presidential Special, Fort Peck, Mont., Aug. 6. — President Roosevelt entered the drought belt today as he continued his homeward transcontinental journey and found a desperate situation, with damage three times as severe as it was when he left Washington, one that will require more help in addition to the $525,000,000 recently appropriated.

As he rode through miles of burnt-up farm land in Montana, he received the latest reports on the steadily mounting drought damage from Lawrence Westbrook, assistant Federal relief administrator, who has just completed a tour of stricken sections.

Mr. Roosevelt was advised that the drought damage has increased 380 per cent since Congress adjourned. It covers 60 per cent of the country. Some 26,000,000 persons have been struck by this calamity. The peak of the suffering and hardship has not been reached. That Federal aid now authorized will barely hold out until Congress meets in January, and more help will have to be authorized then, Mr. Westbrook told the President.

Out of Dreamland.

This blow strikes deep and its effects will not be overcome in a season.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt turned from what he calls practical dreams of the future to stark realities of the present. For three days he has been inspecting the sites of gigantic power, navigation and irrigation enterprises which he hopes will turn scraggly desert into Elysian fields where millions of machine-age husbandmen will, with the aid of man-made rain and cheap power, live in thriving contentment and comfortable prosperity.

Now he steps out of this land of dreams into one where men who also had dreams came thousands of miles by wagon and on foot, and by heroic labor built farm homes which nature has now, in effect, burned to cinders. Between 380,000 and 400,000 families in the 20 drought States are on relief as a result of the drought. At least 10 per cent of these, 30,000 to 40,000 families, will have to move if they want a fighting chance in the future, Mr. Westbrook estimates.

Inspects Fort Peck Dam.

During the long train ride across the parched Montana fields, Mr. Roosevelt studied this problem and caught up on some of the more important mail which had been forwarded from Washington.

There he saw a Government shipyard in the middle of the prairie where scores of huge dredge barges are being built to be used in dredging and pumping earth fill into the dam.

Although the Presidental train resembled a rolling Montana State political convention with a score of office holders or seekers milling up and down the aisles and in the lounge cars, President Roosevelt, in a word of greeting to several thousand persons who waited to meet the train at Havre, declared that "this is not a political campaign."

Says Nation Supports Work.

Yet he added that "I believe the country understands what we are trying to do and is supporting our effort to make a better living for the average citizen."

Taking note of the burned fields as he entered the drought belt, Mr. Roosevelt said he was glad that it had not been any worse than it was.

A little further on it could hardly be any worse.

"We have to provide in the days to come for the elimination of the causes of not only drought, but of the conditions that come from drought," Mr. Roosevelt said. "It is going to take a long time to do it, but, as I have said before, I think we are on our way and that you good people understand it and are supporting it."

At a cost of $84,155,000, the Government will dam up the Missouri River during spring flood seasons and feed out water gradually to maintain a depth of 8 to 9 feet down to St. Louis, where it empties into the Mississippi. This, it is hoped, will encourage river shipping as a means of cheaper transportation to farmers. It is another one of those daring conceptions, worthy of Paul Bunyan himself, in which President Roosevelt revels

—a gamble with the future like Bonneville and Grand Coulee Dams. That is why out here they now call him "the master builder."

Perhaps, in a sense, the drought is a blessing in disguise, for it will enable the Government more easily to persuade thousands of farmers in drought sections to move on to the desert farther West and take advantage of the cheap irrigation and power which will, the President hopes, make that fertile but arid land bloom with profitable crops and where there can be no drought to wipe a farmer out in a single season.

Migration Necessary.

A large migration to populate the Pacific Northwest is necessary if the vast additional power and irrigation contemplated are to find any users.

However, any such new westward migration must be entirely voluntary. The Government is not, contrary to a widespread impression, seeking to forcibly transplant families. In fact the voluntary transplanting now beginning will be carried on entirely within State lines, Mr. Westbrook said today.

"In Montana," he continued, "we have 6,000 farm and ranch families on relief as a result of the drought. About 1,500 of these families are on land not sufficient to maintain them, so we are trying to help them get on good land. We are cooperating with the Agriculture and Interior Departments to buy their poor land, turn it into grazing and then buy good land and resell to the farmers who wish to move where they have a chance of succeeding. That program is entirely voluntary.

"We are organizing in each State a rural rehabilitation corporation. We have them in 20 States now. The FERA is contributing relief workmen to build new houses. Federal land banks are being asked to finance the land. We first lease the land to the farmer so that he may try it out and see if he likes it and if he is suitable to it. Then if he finds he can make a go of it we will sell him the land. In South Dakota we have already moved 100 families."

Not Forced to Move.

When asked about opposition of farmers to being moved, Mr. Westbrook said that this arose from the idea that the Government was going to compel them to move.

"If you tell a man he has to move his resistance will rise immediately," Mr. Westbrook said. "We are only offering to help them relocate if they desire to do so. Twenty-five per cent of the families in Montana and North Dakota ought to take advantage of this opportunity and more in South Dakota."

Crop farming probably will disappear entirely in Montana and the entire State will revert to grazing, in the opinion of W. R. Butler, Federal emergency relief administrator for Montana. He has lived here for years and knows the State intimately.

"Montana never should have broken the land at all. The soil is such that it grows crops well for one to three yers and then it suddenly loses its fertility. In addition, plowing up the land destroyed the buffalo grass which bound the soil together. Now the wind has swept much of the top soil away."

So you might say that farm land in Montana has within a few years become strayed or stolen. Mr. Butler thinks that the only thing left is to let it revert to grazing land with farmers, under irrigation, growing enough feed to carry their stock through the winter months.

New Country.

This is such a new country. It was only 87 years ago, for instance, that Brigham Young and his Mormon followers came out into the great American desert and began the settlement of it. The settlers have been carried on by their own determination and enthusiasm so completely that they have failed, in the opinion of many objective students of the problem, to appreciate the weaknesses of the area. It is a form of disloyalty to speak of these weaknesses.

In Oregon, where there is in some sections too much moisture, the residents do not speak of the rain, they call it "mist."

Robert H. Hinkley, assistant to Westbrook, told of a study made under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution by Prof. Earl Douglas, of the University of Arizona. Prof. Douglas has examined tree rings of hundreds of trees in the Western country. As all students of forestry know, the tree rings reflect the growing conditions at the time. Prof. Douglas has found that about the year 1260 A. D. there was a drought period of 23 years. That date coincides with the migration of the Pueblo Indians from the north to their present location in the south, apparently in search of water.

Slaughter of Cattle.

Much of the wheat land in this section went in during the $2 wheat period at the end of the World War, when Europe was taking wheat at any price. Thus, under the push of an abnormal demand, land was seeded which should never have been touched by the plow. Now the drought merely emphasizes the transitory nature of that agricultural development and the only way out is to retreat.

Slaughter of cattle because of inability to feed and water them is reaching ravenous proportions, which in time will mean perhaps a serious curtailment of meat supply with consequent sharply increased prices for city consumers.

"We will have to butcher 25 per cent of the cattle in this area, or between 7,000,000 and 10,000,000 head," Mr. Westbrook said. "We are killing 200,000 animals a day now, half in commercial packing houses and half with relief labor. This meat is being used exclusively for feeding persons on relief and is being kept off the market.

"We are taking care to preserve for each farm a small breeding herd as a foundation for restocking later on.

"The drought is extending every day. New counties are being added steadily, although it is true that in some sections conditions have been alleviated partially by rain. Then, too, we will not have the permanent problem in sections like Iowa, Michigan or other places where normally there is no difficulty at all. But for this year we can't expect farmers to get anything more. Their crops are gone for the year and they will have to be taken care of next winter. That is when the real peak of the load will be reached."

"Half Moon" Grips Hand of Nation's Chief

U. S. 'Betrayed' By Democrats, Bacon Charges

Says G. O. P. Supported New Deal Plans Only to Aid Relief.

Democrats have "betrayed" American voters by seeking to make permanent emergency legislation passed by Congress, Representative Robert L. Bacon, New York, vice chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, charged last night.

Replying to a statement by Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, which cited heavy Republican votes in Congress for New Deal measures, Bacon accused Byrns of "hypocrisy."

"The Democratic House leader," Bacon protested, "ignores the fact that President Roosevelt urged adoption of New Deal measures not because of merit of the legislation, but because the country faced an emergency, the gravity of which the President himself stressed upon many occasions.

"Republicans in Congress were not playing politics with the depression. Republicans voted for these measures because they were proposed to take care of an emergency and because Congress and the people were told they were but temporary.

"Not Rubber Stamps."

"Republicans did not vote for measures which admittedly were proposed to effectuate permanent changes in our Government structure. Unlike the two-thirds Democratic majority in the House, they did not surrender their legislative responsibilities and duties. They were not rubber stamps. They were glad to vote for the relief of the distressed through helping to pass so-called emergency legislation.

"When the New Deal Administration now proposes to make permanent this emergency legislation which was held to be temporary in character, not only is the trust of the voters who put the New Dealers in office betrayed, but the trust Congress put in the Democratic Administration also is betrayed."

Bacon reported he detected a "plaintive note" in the Byrns statement and asked whether the Democrats were "afraid to make the New Deal an issue?"

"President Roosevelt," Bacon added, "said that the emergency confronting the country was almost as great as that when we were in the great war. I was among those Republicans in Congress who helped in the depression emergency. In doing this, however, I did reserve the right not to subordinate opposition to principles which the New Dealers now propose shall be made permanent or which in the very nature of things would leave a lasting and blighting influence on American lives.

Hypocrisy Recognized.

"The hypocrisy of the representative qualities of the last Congress is fully recognized now for what it was. While the deception is at an end the people will, however, increasingly have reason to evaluate the costs to them.

"They see now why the Democrats applied the gag rule. It was not only to gag the two-thirds Democratic majority but also to suppress free will, free speech and the free sentiments of the country itself. The Republican minority also was completely submerged and to use the Soviet communistic expression, it was completely 'liquidated.'

"Mr. Byrn's complaint shows more than ever that the Congress has got to be truly re-Americanized. It has got to become representative again. It must again become the forum of deliberation, judgment and courage and not simply the repository for gag rules and rubber stamps.

"Unless we are ready to throw all good American traditions overboard we must allow the minority at least to be articulate. To do this we must elect Republicans in November in sufficient numbers to insure against permanency of measures which are now shown to be harmful."

Whirlwind of Labor Troubles Hurts New Deal in Wisconsin

is worth study for the light it sheds not only here but throughout the country on the labor unrest and violence which have become epidemic.

Walter J. Kohler, former Governor of Wisconsin, is conceded to be one of the "enlightened industrialists." Twenty years ago he undertook to establish a model industrial village at his plant. It is not disputed that he tried to avoid paternalism. Anyway, he created what had become celebrated as a model community.

No Previous Unrest.

Ninety per cent of the married workers in his plant—which makes chiefly plumbing fixtures—own their own homes in the model village. These were built by Kohler and sold at cost on easy terms to the employes. A club was built for the single men. The workers elected their own town officials. They had a company union. There had never been any labor unrest or any sign of it, until this year.

Then A. F. of L. organizers went to work. They signed up a disputed number of workers, probably not more than a tenth of the 1,200 employes. Organizers from other cities and States were brought in and preached discontent with the company union and village which must have smacked of paternalism despite the acknowledged efforts of Kohler to avoid it.

However, Kohler prided himself on his liberal policies, on the example he felt was being set for employer-employe relationships, and he still is shocked and stunned at what has happened.

Troops Patrol Plant.

Some 600 State troops now patrol the plant. Wild violence broke out one night before the troops were summoned. Plant pickets and a mob clashed furiously. There were clubbings, tear gas, shooting. Two men lay dead afterward. A score or so were taken to hospitals.

What had happened to this "model industrial village," with its attractive homes, its peaceful gardens? The brilliant hollyhocks were in bloom when the sudden storm broke. Kohler had carried liberality to the utmost, or so he felt, by keeping his plant running throughout the depression, though it was a marked victim of the paralysis in the building industry. He was quick to sign all the NRA codes affecting his business.

"We have in fact gone beyond the requirements of either the letter or the spirit of the law," he said—and it is not challenged even by the labor leaders. "Long before there was any NRA we kept our men at work producing goods that we knew we had to pile up in warehouses because we could not sell them. We have spent large sums of money just to keep men at work."

A. F. of L. Demands.

What had happened was what happened in other cities—and had happened in several preceding strikes here, one of which precipitated mob violence when the street cars were halted and attempts were made to destroy not only the cars but the power houses. The A. F. of L. called the strike when its demands were not met. A 14-point program of demands was submitted to Kohler. They are important and significant.

Aside from demanding a 6-hour day, and 30-hour week, a minimum hourly wage of 65 cents for common labor, seniority, and other details, the important, significant points were the first two. The first called for collective bargaining in conformity with section 7 (a) of the NRA act. Kohler had supposed that he was conforming. At all events, the second point was the most vital. It stipulated that the company should agree to confer with a committee named by Federal Labor Union No. 18545 "on any and all matters affecting the workers of the Kohler plant."

In other words, the company must agree to deal only with the A. F. of L., as the agent and spokesman of labor.

Core of Trouble.

This is the core of the trouble—as it has been elsewhere, as it was in the threatened automobile strike. Kohler, like so many other industrialists, refuses to concede that Section 7A is a charter of exclusive privilege for the A. F. of L. The A. F. of L. insists that it is, in practice and effect. Neither President Roosevelt, in his settlement in the automobile case, nor the NRA in dealing with other cases has yet met and settled this issue squarely.

It can be and has been temporarily adjusted, but it will not down, and it is at the heart of the whole conflict. It is what is causing more immediate alarm among business-banking leaders here than all of their long list of counts against New Deal procedure or policy.

NRA rushed two of the Chicago regional labor board mediators in here, both champions of labor. One, the Rev. Father J. W. Maguire, has had a long record in successful mediation, and his appeal to the strikers was successful in allowing coal to enter the Kohler plant so that the village water supply would not be cut off. He was also instrumental in freeing some 200 workers trapped inside the plant for days.

Aided by Radicals.

Kohler has been standing on the fact that the labor organizers are outsiders. "How can there be any bargaining with law violators who have never worked for us?" he asked.

But what choice has he? Is not Washington behind the A. F. of L.?

Here, as in other places where there have been strikes, the A. F. of L. leaders have been embarrassed by unbidden but unavoidable aid from mobs of idle young men, and from Communist and Socialist agitators. Much of the wilder violence has been laid to them. They hurled the rocks which smashed windows, and collided with heads. They allegedly baited the harassed plant pickets into the folly of firing on the mob, with the resultant two deaths. The soap-box agitators have added all they could to the passions let loose. They are telling the workers that revolution has arrived—that they should take over the plants themselves.

Backed by LaFollette.

Former Gov. Phil LaFollette, now thinking of running again on the ticket of the newly formed LaFollette Progressive party, has given every encouragement to the labor leaders. Is not President Roosevelt soon to arrive here to give his blessing to the LaFollette ticket—at least, to Phil's brother, Senator Bob LaFollette?

Certainly the popular assumption here is that the full authority of the Administration is behind the strike at Kohler. Everyone asks, "But why did the A. F. of L. pick on Kohler, of all people, when he was outstanding as one of the most liberal of the manufacturers?"

And the commonly heard answer is that they picked him out just because he was a shining example, a citadel of what the manufacturers considered advanced liberalism. If labor could smash Kohler it could smash all the rest! So one is told repeatedly.

New Deal Blamed.

And whence comes the unleashing of these uncontrollable forces and passions?

The manufacturer, the business executive, the banker here, have but one reply—the New Deal. It deepens their bitterness against what they think of as a concerted, deliberate program from Washington to recast the whole social-economic order. In such an atmosphere one does not even bother to ask whether private initiative, private enterprise, are reviving.

The Kohler strike has become here a symbol of radical change, of overthrow of old, established principles. Men do not know what is coming, what to expect. The Socialists, powerful here, are pointing one way. Take over industry! Take over the banks! Those are their sovereign remedies. They scoff at the New Deal for merely temporizing.

One finds the business men in this once heavily German-American community apathetic about discussing business conditions when such incalculable forces are in play—when there is no feeling of assurance about what the Government at Washington wants—when Government authority and power seem to be supporitng drastic, unpredictable change.

Rep. Shoemaker Ordered to Jail claimed he was seeking to aid in preserving order.

Another charge growing out of a traffic disagreement is pending in Washington against Shoemaker, who recently failed to win the Minnesota Farmer-Labor nomination for the United States Senate. His first trial in the Capital, on a charge of assaulting a taxi driver, resulted in jury disagreement and the Representative failed to appear on the date set for his second trial.

attorney, who heads the alcohol tax unit, and Capt. William R. Sayles, former naval officer, who commands the enforcement division.

"Capt. Sayles says he's got evidence that even before prohibition they did not try to collect taxes," the Cabinet officer commented. "During prohibition they know they didn't try to enforce it. Let the whisky fellow worry about the taxes."

Refers to Tax Cut.

This last was in reply to insistent questioning as to the Treasury's stand on reducing liquor taxes, which has been agitated by such Administration leaders as Joseph H. Choate, jr., director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, as one means to liquidate the liquor racketeer.

Manifesting the same reluctance for this topic he has shown in the past, Mr. Morgenthau said only that "nothing could be done until Congress meets, as a practical matter. As for the tariff, that's involved in tariff bargaining and is up to the State Department." Heretofore, he has expressed a desire to police the industry before considering taxes.

"I think we're doing all we can by stopping the sale of bootleg liquor," he followed up. "I'm not going to leave a stone unturned to suppress the manufacture of illicit liquor."

When it reaches full strength, the alcohol tax force will far outnumber the Justice Department's old Prohibition Bureau, which had 3,200 agents when President Roosevelt was inaugurated. This number subsequently was cut to 1,300, in anticipatoin of repeal, but postprohibition conditions soon sent it in the ascendancy again.

1,301 Investigators.

Of the 3,291 now employed by the alcohol tax unit, 1,301 are "investigators" engaged in ferreting out illegal stills. The remainder are inspectors, "storekeeper gaugers," &c., employed in the "permissive" branch of the corps. Both forces will be increased as rapidly as Civil Service examinations are held.

In the reorganization, Mr. Morgenthau said all of the promotions were within the service, adding that the changes involved dropping some and advancing others. Administrative positions will pay from $3,800 to $6,500, he said, while $2,600 will be the usual salary for investigators, but "special investigators" will get $2,900.

Widow of Union Official Denied Compensation

Court Holds Morgan Was Not Killed in Line of Duty.

Holding that her husband's murder grew out of his union activities and not from his duties as a machinist at the Navy Yard, the District Court of Appeals yesterday ruled that Mrs. Eleanor M. Morgan, 3629 Jocelyn street northwest, was not entitled to Government compensation for his death.

Morgan, financial secretary of Columbia Lodge, No. 174, International Association of Machinists, was shot as he was leaving his home on the night of September 29, 1932. He died a few days later.

Last month, after a two-year search that took them through 11 States, District police arrested Harrison McKinley Kieser, who had been discharged from a position at the Navy Yard shortly before the shooting. He is charged with murder.

The Appellate Court found that "the injury from which the deceased died arose out of his employment as financial secretary to the lodge, but that it did not occur in the course of his employment."

The former Secretary of War was put forward for Republican Senatorial nominee by members of his party in Loudoun County, Va., where he has maintained a country home since 1931. He disclosed yesterday a prominent Republican from southern Virginia also discussed the matter with him.

"I am very grateful to my fellow Republicans in Virginia," he said, "but I am not a citizen of the State."

Truck Owners Ask U. S. Writ To Curb Olson

End of Militar Rule in Minneapolis Sought in Federal Court.

Minneapolis, Aug. 6 (AP).—A check rein on Gov. Floyd B. Olson and his order strictly limiting vehicle movements in the truck drivers strike, and an end to military rule were demanded of the United States Government today by a group of individual employers.

They filed a court action in United State District Court, appealing for a Federal writ first restraining, then permanently enjoining, the chief executive from closing streets, with the National Guard, to all but those trucks given official permits to operate until the strike is settled.

Adjt. Gen. E. A. Walsh said 47 truck owners among those represented by the employers advisory committee rebelled against the majority's stand for settlement and bowed to the Governor's mandate by subscribing to the Haas-Dunnigan peace plan, thus becoming eligible to operate.

Hearing Due Wednesday.

The action, filed by ten business houses, which included two of the leading merchandise and transfer firms, was signed by Federal Judges Gunnar H. Nordbye and Joseph Molyneaux. They set a hearing for 2 p. m., Wednesday. The application named Gov. Olson, Gen. Walsh and Col. Elmer McDevitt, provost marshal.

Loss of many thousands of dollars and unlawful restrictions which "stifle business in general" were claimed b ythe petitioners.

The application also alleged the military rule edict interferes with the Constitutional rights of citizens; was issued when there was no occasion for such drastic action, and was based on a statement of conditions not existing.

Line Waits For Permits.

Trucking was at a virtual standstill when business opened this morning. By noon, 1,100 permits had been issued and almost 2,000 persons stood in line to make application. Gen. Walsh estimated about 2,500 permits would be issued today. Among those approved by the military were licenses for virtually all the breweries, paper box companies, practically all bottling firms, two large milk companies, a steel concern, and several transfer companies.

Firms trucking commodities other than necessities or newspapers must sign pledges to abide by the Haas-Dunnigan peace plan, if they want to operate.

A. F. of L. Leaders Plan Convention

Green Says Auto Group Will Return to Fold.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Faced with one of the most important periods in the history of organized labor, the American Federation of Labor's executive council met here today to prepare agenda for the federation's annual convention, scheduled for October 1 in San Francisco.

William Green, president of the federation, told reporters that 7,000 union workers in the Hudson Motor Car Co. plant at Detroit who withdrew from the A. F. of L. Saturday, "will be back in a short time."

"They go out and they come back," Green said. "It happened in St. Louis a few months ago and they came back. The local in Detroit will be reorganized and back in the A. F. of L. within a reosnable time."

Gas Prices Drop To 9 Cents in Maryland Row

Today the price had dropped to 9 cents a gallon. There were prospects that it might go even lower. There's not much profit in that, for the State and Federal taxes alone are 5 cents a gallon.

The price war began several days ago when a new dealer, seeking to popularize his filling station, offered two pounds of sugar free with every 5-gallon gasoline purchase. He did a rushing business. To compete with him, the other stations cut prices. Yesterday the town was filled with country people who drove in to take advantage of the price slash.

MY DOG STORY

These are the Dog Days, so surely you have a dog story to tell. The Post is offering $10 for the best tale offered each week. Keep within 250 words, address the Dog Story Editor and send along a printable photo of your canine friend, if possible.

By Ella May Wheeler,
2442 Twentieth Street Northwest.

An empty house. A little white fox terrier, a black saddle and a black patch over one eye, stood on her hind legs, scratching to get in. While she rested from her labors she whimpered pitifully. We saw her from our window and mother went across the street and patted the little dog. There were tears in the dog's eyes and, of course, in mother's. The dog was added to our four others.

Jane's people had gone back to Virginia, leaving her as a boarder in a stable up the street. Jane's brother, Pete, was taken with the old lady who owned them. How she broke away, collarless and tagless, no one knew, but she had found her way back home.

For awhile Jane refused to eat. She would let our four doggies eat her meals, although they were bulging with their own diets. She sat for hours at our window, looking across the street, and it grieved us to see her sorrow.

Her only recreation and solemn pleasure was chasing her tail and she would spin round and round, so after awhile we set her spins to music to add a cheerful note to her dog's day. Jane would sigh after these whirls and take her place at the window to look at her deserted home and think why she was deserted and how they could do it.

Everyone was interested in her remembering, her loyalty, her vigil at the window.

She never saw her old lady mistress again, but a man in the family heard about our having their Jane and came to see her. How glad we thought she'd be to see some of the folks from hom. We all looked forward to an affecting meeting between the sad little abandoned dog and her human kin.

Jane was ushered in, the man talked soft, but what did Jane do? She darted at him and bit him! It showed us that even little dogs wake up to facts sometimes and I would love to be able to translate their thoughts.

Hitler Shuns Politics, Urges Peace in Hindenburg Eulogy

Marshal Gen. Von Hindenburg is not dead. He lives.

"For in dying, he now moves above us * * * surrounded by the great spirits of the past, as an eternal patron and protector of the German Reich and the German nation."

Rites Held in Opera House.

The ceremony today was in the Kroll Opera House, still used for the Reichstag while the building is being repaired as a result of the fire there just before the Nazis came to power.

The room was well packed, and thousands of persons stood outside in the rain, not seeming to notice the inclement weather.

Loud speakers carried Hitler's speech to the people outside, and radio rebroadcasts took it to every corner of the world.

Beethoven Precedes Hitler.

The sad, heroic reluctant strains of Beethoven's Coriolanus overture were played five minutes before Hitler rose to speak.

The chancellor appeared a quite different man from the then harrassed, pleading figure who less than a month ago from the same rostrum defended his summary execution of 77 persons, allegeily involved in mutiny against his regime.

He appeared deeply moved by the sentiments he expressed. His voice and demeanor were quiet except for an occasional dramatic gesture.

With great feeling, and apparently with eye to the plebiscite August 19 in which he is asking approval of his action in taking over executive functions, he referred to the "new resurrection" which we want to preserve as a precious heritage."

Speaks of Hero's Service.

He referred reverently to "the unmeasurable serivce the field marshal general rendered historically by reconciling in his name the best in Germany's past with the passionately yearned for better German future."

In the early portion of his speech Hitler traced the career of the dead president from his birth through the wars of 1866 and 1870 and told of his being twice recalled from retirement to serve the Fatherland.

The first time was in 1914, when he won his great victory over the Russians, in memory of which Germany erected the Tannenberg monument, where he will be buried.

The second came in 1925, when he was first elected Reichspresident.

In the speech Hitler again referred to the fact that he is not asking for himself the title of Reichspresident which Von Hindenburg bore.

In speaking of the call of Von Hindenburg to war in 1914, Hitler declared that the late president was "as innocent of the beginning of war as anybody in this world could be."

The German people, he said also, were "sacredly convinced of having been attacked without their guilt."

After Hitler's speech, Hermann Wilhelm Goering, as President of the Reichstag, speaking directly to Col. Oskar von Hindenburg, who with his wife sat in front of the rostrum, extended to the family the condolences of the nation.

Cabinet Files By.

Then to the slow notes of a funeral march, members of the cabinet filed slowly down to give their personal condolences to Col. Von Hindenburg.

Among them was Franz von Papen, friend of the dead President, who was in the Vice Chancellor's place beside Hitler.

In the audience was former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, who was in the front row of the balcony as representative of his family. He wore a field gray uniform.

Crowds had been in the streets early in the morning, although the services did not start until noon.

Citizens Call for Hitler.

Many persons massed around the Chancellor before Hitler left and called again and again for his appearance. Several times he showed himself for an exchange of salutes.

Reichswehr details, Schutz Staffel men and police protected the entire section and cleared the way for Hitler's automobile in the drive from the chancellery to the Opera House.

For the first time in a public appearance Hitler was given the salute of honor by the Reichswehr, which has sworn personal allegiance to him.

Services Here Today to Honor Hindenburg

More Than 1,000 Expected to Attend Concordia Church Rites.

Led by Secretary of State Cordell Hull and members of the Diplomatic Corps, hundreds of Washingtonians will participate in colorful memorial services to Germany's late President Paul von Hindenburg at Concordia Lutheran Church, Twentieth and G streets northwest, today.

The rites will begin at noon with a detachment from the Army Band playing "Ich Hat Einen Guten Kameraden," as Secretary of State, representing President Roosevelt, and delegates from the various legations enter the church. In the absence of Ambassador Hans Luther, the German Embassy staff will be led by Dr. Rudolf Leitner, Charge d'Affaires.

Flags to Decorate Pulpit.

From the pulpit, which will be decorated with flags of the Reich, Dr. Charles Enders, pastor of the Concordia Church, will deliver the invocation. A hymn will be followed by Scriptural reading by the Rev. Henry H. Rank, minister of Grace Reformed Church.

One of Beethoven's funeral marches next will be played by the band detachment Dr Enders will deliver the requiem address, taking as his topic, "Von Hindenburg, Soldier and Statesman"

More Than 1,000 Expected

The Rev. Fritz Evers, of Zion Lutheran Church, Baltimore, will lead a brief prayer in German. Benediction will be followed by taps, which will conclude the services.

More than 1,000 persons are expected to pack the church auditorium and the annex. Special arrangements have been made to have the program carried to those not in the church auditorium by amplifiers.

For half an hour before the rites begin the band will play selections from the pens of famous German composers.

Walmsley Signs Permit.

A permit for the Communist and Socialist groups to meet was signed by Mayor Walmsley.

Speakers mounted on boxes shouted their disapproval of Senator Long, Gov. O. K. Allen and Mayor Walmsley. The gathering adopted resolutions calling on the city and State to discontinue expenditures for troops and special police in order that the money might be distributed to the relief of unemployed. The failure of the last Legislature to appropriate State welfare funds, which resulted in 15,000 being dropped from the relief rolls last week, was assailed.

Crowds gathered to her the speeches and the guardsmen leaned out of the registration office window to listen. City employes packed City Hall balconies.

Score of police moved through the crowd.

When the resolutions were adopted, the demonstrators moved away waving banners reading "Against Terror and Frame-Ups" and "Free Rent for Nnemployed."

Lotto Games Banned.

Announcing that he was acting "to avoid even a technical excuse for Gov. Allen's National Guard invading the city," Police Superintendent Georeg Reyer today extended the local gambling ban to include even lotto games sponsored by church and civic organizations.

One lotto party, given by the Ninth Ward Protective Association on the lawn of a residence, was raided and Louis Denbaum, 58, charged with operating the bank. The game, costing five cents to play, is similar to keno and has long been popular here at charity benefits.

The elaborate gambling casinos in and about the city voluntarily closed several weeks ago, when the State and city fuss became heated and the governor instructed the militia to investigate "voice conditions."

Hindenburg's Body Started On Last March

thousands gathered for the funeral ceremonies.

The bands then joined in playing the hymn, "I Pray for the Power of Love," followed by a short prayer by the chaplain.

Torches Light Way.

Torches lighted the way down the flowered highway, carried by thousands of men, in the uniforms of army and semi-military Nazi organizations. Their flickering light cast a weird glow over the procession.

The caisson was preceded by officers on foot, carrying Von Hindenburg's decorations and his field marshal's baton on cushions. In the first section of the march were the Reichswehr regiments Nos. 2, 9 and 16, the colorbearers of the imperial army, and regiments 91 and 147 of the third guards, in which Von Hindenburg served.

The infantry, with fixed bayonets glistening in the torchlight, made an impressive display.

Mixed Choir Sings.

A mixed choir from Freystadt, nearest town to Neudeck, "Jesus, My Faith" at final ceremonies outside the mansion. Local foresters blew on their hunting horns the "hunt ended" call as four naval officers and four army captains fixed the casket on the caisson. It was draped with white cloth, on which an Iron Cross lay.

Through the night, past scenes of the aged warrior's childhood, the procession moved to the measured tread of the soldiery.

A motorized artillery unit waited about three miles from Neudeck to take over the casket. Escorted by Reichswehr cavalry, the pace will be accelerated until 4 a. m., when infantry details again joining the procession, due in Tannenberg at 5 a. m.

Women Are Barred.

The casket will be placed in the field marshal's tower and removed to the catafalque in the center of the Tannenberg Memorial Court of Honor shortly prior to the official ceremony, starting at 11 a. m.

Hitler again is to make the chief oration prior to burial in the marshal's tower of the memorial, Von Hindenburg's final resting place at the scene of his great victory over the Russians in 1914.

Outside the memorial, cordons will be formed of the black-uniformed elite Storm Troops and Prussian state police, to keep back a throng estimated at 200,000. Only a few hundred men and no women will be permitted inside the honor court.

4,300-Acre Park Project Approved

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Representative Jennings Randolph has received word from Washington that a Federal-State Park in Morgan County to be known as Cacapon Park, has been approved.

It will be 14 miles long and cover 4,300 acres. The proposed area is in beautiful woodlands on the "skyline" between Berkeley Springs and Fort Ridge.

Arrangements have been made, Mr. Randolph says, for 240 CCC workers to start work on the project about October 1.

D. C. Aviatrix Denied Victory In Fatal Race

MISS EDNA M. GARDNER.

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 6 (AP).—The well-known woman speed and endurance flier, Frances Harrell Marsalis, will fly back home in death tomorrow.

She was killed in the 50-mile featured race in the first National air meet for women here yesterday.

Today a cabin plane set out from New York to bear her back to Long Island City for burial.

Meanwhile, judges considered a protest today over the finish of the race in which Mrs. Marsalis died, and awarded victory to Miss Helen Richey, of McKeesport, Pa., who with Mrs. Marsalis set a women's endurance record over Miami last December.

Miss Edna M. Gardner, of Washington, had been declared winner of the 50-mile event, with Miss Richey second. Miss Gardner was disqualified today on a protest that she had cut the main pylon in the fourth lap. Those finishing behind her moved up in the final standings as a result.

Redskin Chief Does a 'Custer's Stand' in Reverse

Towson, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—The Sunday quiet of this small Baltimore suburb was considerably ruffled yesterday when an Indian chief, attired in featherly regalia, was chased from his medicine truck by a small mob of clowns.

The chief, so police reported, had not paid the clowns their salaries of "wampum" for helping him sell "lightning alligator oil" and was in a fair way of being scalped.

Badly reversing Custer's last stand, the chief, his bright feathers beating a tattoo on the breezes behind him, fled into the arms of the law for protection.

The assistants—six colored and one white man, went on the war path, paint and all, when they claimed they failed to receive their wampum.

It was finally straightened out when the chief, who gave the name of Sunnysky, proffered the pipe of peace at Towson police headquarters and divided up some $25.

Court Rooms Taken From 'Drinking' Judge

Los Angeles, Aug. 6 (AP).—Superior Judge Harry F. Sewell, who has been accused in an affidavit filed by Presiding Judge Frank Collier of having been intoxicated on the bench, was deprived of his courtrooms today.

Judge Collier, who also has ordered that no more cases be assigned Judge Sewell, assigned to other judges the two courtrooms in which Judge Sewell has been sitting.

Battleships Due At Norfolk Today

Three Farm Vanguard for Maneuvers.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—The first of more than 70 fighting and auxiliary ships of the United States Navy will arrive here tomorrow for a month of sea maneuvers off the Virginia Capes.

The Battleships Texas, New York and Tennessee are expected as the vanguard of the fleet of which the California, flagship of Vice Admiral Frank H. Brumby, is senior vessel. The California is due here Saturday. The Wyoming and Arizona, with 900 midshipmen aboard, will arrive Thursday after a cruise in European waters.

Elaborate entertainment has been arranged for officers, midshipmen and enlisted men during their shore periods. The training schedule calls for sea duty tours and gunnery practice.

Shot From Dark Kills Man Disrobing for Bed

Martinsburg, Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.). Henry County police authorities followed a blind trail today in seeking a solution of a murder mystery which came to light at Philpott, near the Patrick line, yesterday when John William Sigman, 57, was found dead in his kitchen.

A shot fired through an open window had killed him in the act of undressing. Sigman was a widower who, neighbors said, "did not have an enemy in the world."

Many Producers Promise Ample Product for New Theatrical Season of 1934-35

Is Tryout for Production as Big-Time Play

Deals With "Career" Men; Maxine Doyle Stricken; Amusement Jottings.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Diplomatic representatives of more than a dozen foreign nations, it is announced, tonight will attend the premiere of "Welcome to His Excellency," the new comedy by Douglas Griesemer, when it is given its first performance on any stage in the Roadside Theater, the Capital's "barn theater located 6 miles the other side of Bethesda, Md., on the Rockville pike, opposite the Congressional Airport.

In presenting this manuscript play, the Roadside Theater, for the first time this summer, assumes the primary function of the "barn" theater by testing the suitability of a heretofore unacted play for subsequent Broadway production.

It is perhaps significant that the local acting group undertakes this considerable task just as the summer season reaches its halfway point. In New York and vicinity this week, 14 new plays are being similarly tried by fire. The outcome of the Roadside undertaking will be watched with interest not only in Washington but by Manhattan as well, in the hope that here may be another play worthy to be brought to Broadway later on.

Based on Contrast.

The new Griesemer comedy contrasts the typical "career" diplomat with the political appointee, whose diplomatic training has been in the tough school of good, old, American business—assuming that there is sometime again to be something approximating "good, old, American business."

To Col. Norwood, newly appointed Minister to Serbania, drawing up a treaty is just another big deal, while to the secretaries of the legation it is quite something else again! A colorful, but sagacious, prince and a high-spirited daughter of the minister supply the love interest.

Denis E. Connell heads the cast as Col. Norwood. Virginia Rand, Marvin Beers, Joseph Haltigan, Walter Pick, Helena Cook, Betty Rice and Kenn Romney complete the roster of principals under the direction of Harold Weinberger.

Since my desk phone has qualified as a sort of barometer of public interest in the roadside productions, I forecast that "Welcome to His Excellency" will open tonight to capacity.

Arrangements were completed yesterday, while we are on the topic, to broadcast the last act of "Welcome to His Excellency," from the stage of the Roadside Theater, tomorrow night, beginning at 10:15 o'clock and continuing until the fall of the final curtain. The broadcast will be over Station WMAL of the N. B. C. system, with Don Douglas as announcer. A sufficient entr'acte summary of what has gone before will be put on the air to make the last-act broadcast intelligible to the tuners-in.

Maxine Shows Grit.

Those who listened in to the "Hollywood Parade" broadcast from the West Coast on Sunday night, were distressed to hear the announcer report that Maxine Doyle, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, who has just begun to go places on the screen, was working on the "Six-Day Bicycle Rider" set at Warner Brothers with physicians constantly in attendance just outside the camera lines in an effort to complete her scenes in the Joe E. Brown picture before succumbing to an attack of acute appendicitis.

Max was making a nervy fight to finish her part before the sudden attack finished her. In any event, the minute the cameras stopped grinding she was to be rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation. That's the kind of stuff real troupers are made of.

A host of Washington friends wish her well and wonder how the plucky kid may be faring.

Speaking of broadcasts — as we seem to be almost exclusively, begging your pardon, Mr. Radio Waves and Ripples —Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, has reincarnated himself as "The RKO Columnist" for the benefit of "One More River," Universal's all-star picturization of the John Galsworthy novel, opening on Fifteenth street tomorrow. He spoke last evening at 5:30 over WMAL, is scheduled for WRC today and hopes to crash WJSV in time to do some good. Among the principals in "One More River" are Diana Wynyard, Colin Clive, Frank Lawton, Mrs. Pat Campbell, Reginald Denny, Jane Wyatt, Lionel Atwill, C. Aubrey Smith, Alan Mowbray and Henry Stephenson. Quite a cast, my masters.

Animal Actors.

With final rehearsals being held today for tomorrow night's performance of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," in the National Sylvan Theater, by the Washington Community Players, it has been noted by observant members of the cast that every play the Community Players have produced has enlisted the services of a live animal or bird.

In the recent production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" it was the dog, Ugly; in "Treasure Island," it was Arthur Godfrey's parrott, and in "Alice" it will be little Miss Phyllis Heider's cat, Dodo—Unless Dodo is outranked by the small black kitten that marched into Central High School auditorium from nowhere and joined the troupe on her own.

It is understood that the Community Players' next production will be Ali Baba or The Cave of the Forty Thieves. If so, the services of a donkey will be required. Those owning trained donkeys or burrows might begin filing their applications now.

Reverting momentarily to Maxine Doyle and her career on the screen to date, it will not be possible, after all, to pair "Student Tour," in which she is featured under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner, with the "All-Washington Revue" at Loew's Fox the week of August 17. The National release date of "Student Tour" has been pushed back into September, thus destroying its eligibility for any August public screening. What will be put in its place has not as yet been determined by the Loew executives.

"With Beer and Pretzels."

Nightly rehearsals are being held by the Roof Players atop the Hotel Willard, for the forthcoming presentation of Phineas T. Barnum's old-time melodrama, "The Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved," which will open a week from tonight, Tuesday, August 14, at 8:45 o'clock, with beer and pretzels on the side and to the lively accompaniment of an ancient "olio" and a burst of community singing at the drop of the final curtain.

"The Drunkard" is being directed by Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard, who recently did so well with "Treasure Island," and who has made several trips to New York to familiarize herself with the technique of the company that has scored such a sensational hit with the play there.

From West Coast.

Also included in the local production group are M. Forney Reese, who witnessed several performances in Los Angeles, where "The Drunkard" is in its second year; Hugo Inden, well-known scenic artist, Anne Ives and Maurice Jarvis.

Many of the local players importantly cast in "The Drunkard" have appeared recently, or are appearing, in Frank Baer's "Rhapsody in Blah," "Alice in Wonderland" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

We should like to know, also, the name of the beer and the genesis of the pretzels!

Colin Clive, the young British actor who appeared opposite Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake," has made three trips from London to Hollywood to appear in pictures directed by his old friend and fellow-countryman, James Whale. First was "Journey's End," then "Frankenstein" and now "One More River," Universal's picturization of John Galsworthy's last novel.

Evaluation Note.

In one of these, "Journey's End," Mr. Clive was wholly and efficiently himself. What he does in "One More River," of course, remains to be seen. But in "Frankenstein" he was only about half as good as he should have been.

Sort of a semi-Colin, as you might say!

Fields Seen Through Mud Scows

W. C. Fields appears to be posing for an illustration for Kipling's "Boots," but, as a matter of fact, is merely enjoying a bit of rest and relaxation between scenes of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Mr. Fields' feet aren't really that big—they just feel that way after a day on the set and out in all that mud!

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Aug. 6.—Rivalry looms over that grand old movie subject, "The Three Musketeers," once made by Douglas Fairbanks.

GRACE MOORE.

Two different productions are proposed, one a dramatic feature and the other a musical film. The dramatic version (probably more comedy-drama than actual dramatic) has been planned by RKO with Francis Lederer as the star.

Now enters William Anthony McGuire with a musical feature in mind, and, if he has his way, no less a star than Lawrence Tibbett will sing the lead. It is understood Tibbett already has been invited to take the role.

McGuire hopes to produce a screen adaptation of the musical play which Florenz Ziegfeld produced in New York. McGuire wrote the book for the stage musical version. How his control of the subject by this name will work out in any controversy with RKO remains to be seen. In addition to Tibbett, it is understood the services of Grace Moore also may be sought.

* * * *

"Wizard of Oz" Also on Fire.

Much discussion is going about concerning the "Wizard of Oz." It appears fairly definite that this feature, based on Frank Baum's famous stories, will be made within the next six months.

Samuel Goldwyn is known to have been dickering with various authors for a modern adaptation, the intention being to make the picture a "fairy tale suitable for grown-ups," which was what the wizard proved to be on the stage when Montgomery and Stone were seen in the musical version years ago.

* * * *

Horton To Sing.

Edward Everett Horton finally has consented to sing in "The Gay Divorce." He rebelled and rebelled, even threatening to demolish his RKO contract, but finally consented. Although he has warbled in a picture or two, Horton is mighty averse to the whole idea. While in Los Angeles stock, he took part only once in a musical show. Some caroling also will be done in this picture by Betty Grable, who has just been signed, along with Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and others.

* * * *

Cooper's Stay Short.

Gary Cooper's jaunt East to rejoin Sandra Shaw proved short-lived. Understanding that ten days delay was expected in starting "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," he hopped a plane to be with his wife in New York. He landed there only to find orders for immediate return. Miss Shaw will remain in New York for a while.

* * * *

"Now and Forever"— A Preview.

Shirley Temple can always be depended on to bring light and sunshine to the picture. Her perfect naturalness is again triumphant in "Now and Forever," in which her talents are matched with those of Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard. In a vague sort of way, this picture follows the mood of "Little Miss Marker," but the situation is far more intimate, as it concerns the fates of only two characters, besides the child star, rather than the effect on a group.

Shirley, at all events, with her charm, is the guiding spirit of good in a plot that climaxes with a theft done for her sake, and which finds her stoutly symbolizing the ideal of righteousness. Her determined "honor bright" when she wants to be told the truth and her unhappiness over the wrong perpetrated by Cooper cause things to be set straight, but at a cost that is pretty heavy for the two who are devoted to her.

The picture ending, as previewed, was inclined to be far too somber. Still, it is, all in all, appealing and worth while, and presents an attractive performance.

Five Face Trial In Girl's Death

Wilkesboro, N. C., Aug. 6 (AP).—Five members of a farm family will go on trial in Wilkes County Superior Court here tomorrow on charges of murder and accessory to murder in the slaying of a 20-year-old girl, alleged to have been killed to prevent her revealing evidence connecting one of their number with another death.

The defendants are Warwick W. Tilley, 60; his wife, 58; their sons, Luther, 32, and Clyde, 18, and Luther's wife, Minerva, 30. Their alleged victim was Leoda Childress, foster daughter of the elder Tilleys.

The girl was found dead of a rifle bullet in the Tilley home last December 30. A note produced by her foster parents said robbers were in the house and had threatened to kill her unless she revealed where Tilley kept his money. Handwriting experts said the girl did not write the note. For a time officers held a theory of suicide.

After lengthy investigation, Solicitor John R. Jones said he had evidence connecting Luther Tilley and Winfield Stanley with the death of Andrew Eldridge seven years previously and formulated a theory that Leoda was slain to prevent her telling of Luther's connection with the other death.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

ALL appointments made now at Federal Housing Administration are temporary (30-day basis), it was announced yesterday at FHA, where applications still are pouring in at the rate of 2,500 a day.

BAKER

Prospects of immediate employment at FHA have about faded, as an adequate staff of temporary workers on the home-renovation and modernizing activities is already at work. Applications received now, except in a few instances, can be considered only as prospects for future employment, when the permanent activities are organized. It is declared that this will take place late in the fall.

No applicant can be assured that employment will be tendered immediately or in the near future. Therefore, FHA officials said, applicants are advised not to file application with the expectation of being employed immediately, if at all.

The confusion that existed for two weeks after FHA offices were opened in the new Postoffice Building, when literally thousands of unemployed jammed the corridors daily, is being cleared up under the new personnel director, Troy Hewett. A staff of interviewers is handling the applicants smoothly. Chairs have been provided for many who are waiting to file applications at room 6502.

Overtime is the rule at FHA, as has been the case with the launching of the other emergency agencies. The staff is working into the night. FHA officials point out that they are getting results in actual organization and are already beyond preliminaries.

FHA employes received their checks promptly on the August 1 pay day. This punctuality is cited as an example of efficiency.

Trade Commission Party.

Fetracom, the social organization of the Federal Trade Commission, will give its annual summer party on the Terrace, at the Shoreham Hotel, Thursday evening. Members of the newly formed Securities and Exchange Commission will join the group for dinner and dancing.

Among the new commissioners who will attend are Ferdinand Pecora and James M. Landis. Garland S. Ferguson, chairman of FTC, and Mrs. Ferguson also will attend. Officers of Fetracom are Henry P. Alden, president; Henry Landk, vice president, and Miss Margaret M. Byrnes (*), social chairman.

Miss Clarice Shimm, editor, Children's Bureau, is alleviating the physical wear of office duties this summer by before-breakfast tennis and evening swims in the pool at Arlington Hall, Va., where she is spending the summer.

K. J. (Jack) Murata, geologist, won the championship in the Smithsonian Institution singles tennis tournament over T. T. Belote, curator division of history. The match was a close one. Both contestants came forth with some sensational playing. The scores were 6—1, 1—6 and 6—4.

'Jockey' Pilots Plan Discarded; Navy Can't Find Enough Men

Half of One Per Cent of Fliers Weigh Less Than 125.

Development of a squadron of "jockey" pilots to fly special Naval airplanes has been found impractical and has been discarded, the Bureau of Aeronautics stated yesterday.

"Since the practical application of aviation to military needs, there has been a continuous struggle in design in which weight factors have opposed the considerations of maneuverability," bureau officials said.

"Naval aviation has long been a leader in the field of weight reduction, one of the outstanding results being the development of the modern air-cooled aircraft engine.

"Recently the Navy Department broadened the scope of this weight reduction investigation to include the personnel who actually fly the aircraft."

The Bureau of Aeronautics cooperating with the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, investigated to find out if a sufficient number of fliers weighing between 115 to 125 pounds could be found to man a squadron of ships.

The plan came to a halt right there. Only one-half of 1 per cent were found under the 125-pound mark. Eighty-five per cent of the Navy's fliers weigh between 130 and 180 pounds. One and one-half per cent weigh more than 200.

Navy officials stated yesterday that whereas a number of lightweight pilots "might" be of service they are not interested enough to go out and draft small men for flying duty.

Paris Upholds Naval Treaty

Japan Is Denied Support in Move for Revision in 1935.

Paris, Aug. 6 (AP).—France denied Japan her support in any steps toward abrogation of the Washington Naval Treaty of 1921 by announcing today her intention to adhere to its provisions pending "some change in the European situation."

Although French officials indicated that France will seek to improve her position with safeguards of her naval superiority over Germany at the 1935 conference in London, a spokesman declared:

"There is no question of denouncing the Washington Treaty. France does not intend to reconsider the treaty's provisions unless the European situation, particularly the new demands of certain countries in Europe, modifies her position."

France's refusal to participate in a possible denouncement by Japan of the naval agreement—a denouncement which, under the terms of the treaty, would have to be made before the end of 1934—was seen in the spokesman's statement that "no change in the situation is visaged before next year."

He said if Germany, whose fleet was virtually nonexistent when the Washington Treaty was signed, attempts to increase it, France then would be compelled to raise her own strength. Such a development is regarded as unlikely.

Marine Sentry Found Floating in Manila Bay

Manila, Aug. 6 (AP).—Corpl. Alden Ross, United States Marines, who had been missing since Saturday night while on guard duty at Cavite, was found dead today in Manila Bay near the place where he was last seen.

A rope encircled his neck and an autopsy showed he was dead before being thrown into the water.

Costes Reaches Brindisi Safely, Allaying Fears

Paris, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Dieudonne Costes, famous French transatlantic flier, arrived safely at Brindisi, Italy, at 1:10 p. m. today and continued toward Athens at 2:52 p. m., the Italian Embassy announced.

The announcement set at rest fears for Costes's safety on a flight to Greece, with a scheduled stop at Rome, where he was overdue.

Giving Police 'the Bird' Is Upheld by Court

Coney Island, N. Y., Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Giving a traffic policeman "the bird" got legal sanction today in Magistrate David Malbin's Court.

Releasing David Fish and Julius Maslie, Judge Malbin told Policeman Rubin Unterweiser: "It's no crime to hand you 'the bird.' We all get it now and then."

Unrest Stirred In Textile Zone By Kidnaping

Armed Alabama Workers Guard Union Chief; Abductor Sought.

Huntsville, Ala., Aug. 6 (AP).—Beneath a surface calm was a strong undercurrent of apprehension in this textile center tonight as officers sought an unnamed man in connection with the abduction of John Dean, international representative of the United Textile Workers of America.

The abduction yesterday was the first violence against any of the 5,000 striking textile workers or their leaders since the walkout July 17.

Dean was taken from his hotel room, driven away in an automobile by four unmasked men, and registered in a hotel at Fayetteville, Tenn., by the men, who warned him not to return here.

Dean returned, however, and today was in a home in the Merrimac village, which was heavily guarded by armed strikers. On two trips to town the labor leader had an escort of five carloads of armed men.

In announcing the issuance of a warrant for a man in connection with the abduction, Solicitor James A. Pride said the incident would be placed before the grand jury, which convenes next Monday.

The abduction has divided the city into two distinct groups, strikers and their sympathizers on one side, and antistrike sympathizers on the other.

Pickets at the Lincoln mill today expressed resentment toward the chamber of commerce, which has sought to settle the strike and yesterday launched an advertising campaign on the question.

The mill owners, one citizen said, declared they had not been informed of what the strikers wanted except through newspapers and the strike was called without any request for arbitration.

In calling the State-wide walkout, union leaders demanded a permanent 30-hour week, a minimum $12 weekly wage and elimination of the "stretch-out" system under which the number of looms per worker is increased.

North Carolina Acts To Halt Fever Gains

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 6 (AP).—State and Federal health officials moved today to stamp out blackwater fever, a malignant form of malaria which has reached epidemic proportions in parts of Camden County.

Dr. J. C. Knox, State epidemiologist, prepared to go back to Camden County tomorrow to study the situation. Dr. Bruce Mayne, malaria expert of the United States Public Health Service, was due in Camden County today to take charge of investigations for the Federal department. A corps of nurses will work under him. Five deaths have been reported out of 75 recent cases of the disease.

U. S. Shifts Plan To Keep Price Of Tobacco Up

(Associated Press.)

With the first objective, parity price, reached for flue-cured tobacco, the Farm Administration yesterday was studying proposals for a change in plans to attain the second goal—keeping it there.

Parity price for the farmer is the aim of the agricultural adjustment act. In the case of tobacco, it is defined as the price the grower must receive so that his product may have the purchasing power it had in the 1919-29 period.

Officials said yesterday that, excluding benefit payments, flue-cured tobacco was the first basic commodity to go to parity at the beginning of a marketing season.

J. B. Hutson, the tobacco section chief, said with prices around 21 cents on the recently opened Georgia-Florida markets, that the price objective had been slightly exceeded. Hutson said the two-year average prior to 1933, at the time the market opened, was around 9.5 cents a pound.

Credit Given Crop Cut.

Credit for the flue-cured rise is due to a number of factors, officials said, but foremost among them is the program which restricted production.

Nevertheless, although some restrictive features on acreage probably will remain, Hutson indicated the emphasis might be shifted to expanding markets.

In this connection, there was seen the likelihood that the flue-cured farmers would be allowed more leeway for planting next year. Current production has been estimated at approximately 100,000,000 pounds less than consumptive demands.

Removal of the surplus, the aim of restriction, Hutson said had been achieved to all "practical purposes."

The farm administration apparently has two things in mind for flue-cured: Expanding the foreign market through reciprocal tariff agreements and broadening domestic consumption, perhaps by means of substantial reductions in the Federal tobacco tax.

Hutson recently suggested the levy might be slashed so a package of 15 cigarettes would sell for a nickel. Congress will decide whether that is to be done.

Hope for Cuban Market.

Some tobacco growers are hopeful the trade agreement now being negotiated with Cuba will contain clauses that will open the island market for more flue-cured, used principally in the manufacture of cigarettes.

The administration, Hutson said, also is banking rather heavily on a mounting domestic demand resulting from business improvement generally.

Whether the Kerr-Smith tobacco act, which sets up a rigid compulsory crop control system, is to be continued next year will be determined by the growers in a referendum to be held prior to March.

Hutson said there seemed little doubt that the farmers would vote in behalf of the act. He said it had more potential future value than it has for current use.

Nonprofit Agency Runs Most Desirable Public Play Centers

By James D. Secrest.

The most desirable of Washington's recreational facilities controlled by the National Capital Parks Office are operated by a peculiar concessioner which boasts that it makes no profit. It is the Welfare and Recreational Association.

It first came into being as the Joint Welfare Service during the World War. The superintendent of the War and Navy buildings started the organization to place merchandise on sale in public buildings for the benefit of Government employes. The superintendent himself financed the service until it could pay its way, thus no Government funds were ever utilized.

The revolving fund grew until concessions in other buildings were absorbed, and finally it acquired control of swimming pools, tennis courts, the Washington Tourist Camp, a golf course, tea houses, news stands, and—the most profitable of all—cafeterias in Government buildings.

The organization kept the name of the Joint Welfare Service until 1927, when Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and public parks, was instrumental in having it incorporated in District courts as a non-profit making corporation so that it could execute contracts and sue and be sued.

Manager Employed Since 1929.

Since 1929 a general manager has been employed, whereas before that time Army officers were assigned to the job, and no employe of the Government has devoted any time to the venture, except when the trustees meet once a month. While the association is open to any Government employe in good standing above the rank of chief clerk, if approved by the trustees, there are only 20 members. The general manager is Frank W. Hoover.

The association has 500 on its payroll of $38,000 a month. Its accounts are audited by the comptroller general, and 50 per cent of its net profits are deposited to the credit of the Federal Government in the Treasury, while the other 50 per cent is spent in improving and expanding the facilities it operates.

Net revenue amounts to $85,000 a month, but never more than $24,000 is deposited in the Treasury at the end of a year, although this half profit comprises the only rent paid for the use of government building and property space.

A report filed with the investigators of the Senate District Committee covering the nine months ended September 30, 1933, showed a loss of $18,522.80 on operation of outdoor recreational areas and tea houses, the only profitable unit being the Hains Point Tea House, which earned $564.94.

$150,000 Spent on Camp.

The Washington Tourist Camp, except during the last two years, has proved a money-maker, according to Capt. Hoover, but $150,000 has been expended in developing it.

While Capt. Hoover insists that salaries paid in his organization are below the Government scale, criticism has been directed against the association for being overstaffed, and it has been hinted that members of Congress have used it to place some of their constituents.

An example of what the critics consider over-staffing is found in the personnel assigned to the Anacostia golf course, where there is a manager, field foreman, assistant foreman, four green keepers, one mechanic and assistant mechanic, two guards, one professional, a janitor, a starter, a utility man, and five cafe employes.

The association operates 54 of the 89 tennis courts under the jurisdiction of the National Parks Office and charges for them. It also operates four of Washington's few swimming pools; the new Takoma Park and Banneker pools and the McKinley and Francis School pools. It has two hours of free swimming in the mornings for children, however.

The organization has no jurisdiction over the remainder of the Takoma and Banneker centers, however, nor does it operate the three other National Capital Parks Office recreation centers—the Franklin, Langdon and Taft—because they have no swimming pools.

Public Golf Courses Leased.

The other public golf courses, because they are more popular, are leased under competitive bids to commercial enterprises by the National Capital Parks Office.

The S. G. Loeffler Operating Co. now pays $15,120 for the current year to collect fees on the courses in Rock Creek and Potomac Parks. Another $1,000 is obtained from the Capital Speed Boat Corporation, which operates speed boats for hire off Hains Point.

But this $16,120, as well as the 20 odd thousand a year that comes from the Welfare and Recreational Association, go into the Federal Treasury to the credit of the Federal Government. While this amount is practically lost in the Federal income, it would be substantial if turned over to one or more of the recreational agencies for exapnsion or improvement.

Just why this revenue obtained from District taxpayers utilizing public property that the District pays to maintain should go into the Federal Treasury is one of the many unexplainable phases of the fiscal relations between the District and the Federal Government.

L. H. Weir, the National Recreation Association expert who is conducting a survey of Washington's recreational facilities, does not favor operation of public play equipment by concessioners, but he declined to comment on the local situation until he files his report with the National Capital Park & Planning Commission.

"I think that on the whole public property should be operated by public agencies and for public benefit," he said. "If there is any profit to be made it should go back to the public agency and be used for further improvements or expansions."

(Tomorrow's article will deal with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and its plans for Washington.)

Struck by Truck, Man Sues for $20,000

Bush said that he was walking along the sidewalk at Mount Pleasant street and Park road northwest, June 15, when he was hit by the truck. He listed numerous injuries.

Goldsborough To Run Alone; Bans Orations

Avoids Personal Attacks to Keep G.O.P. Solid in Election.

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—On the eve of his departure for a week's tour of Western Maryland, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, indicated today that he would not name a State-wide slate to run with him in the primary election.

He also let it be known that he will not make any public addresses during the primary, so he will not be required to make any attacks upon the candidates who are opposing him for the nomination. The object of thus avoiding personalities is to make certain that there will be no hard feelings on the part of defeated candidates which will serve to split the Republican party as the general election approaches, it is said.

Senator Goldsborough, accordingly, will continue his policy of greeting voters personally. Tomorrow night he will be the guest of honor at a reception for voters of Allegany County at the Fort Cumberland Hotel. He will make only a short, informal talk. Wednesday he will spend in Allegany County, and Thursday will visit Garrett. Friday he will be in Washington County.

Race for Bench Certain.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—A Democratic primary contest for the nomination for resident judge of Anne Arundel County and associate of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Maryland became a certainty today when Judge Nicholas H. Green, of Annapolis, incumbent, and Eugene P. Childs, Second District, filed certificates of their candidacies.

Judge Green was appointed to the bench by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in the fall of 1932 when the term of Judge Robert Moss expired, and for some time it was felt there would be no opposition to him for the renomination for the full term of 15 years. He has been endorsed by a majority of the County Bar Association. Recently, however, opposition appears to have developed from certain quarters and friends of Mr. Childs prevailed upon him to enter.

On the Republican side Roscoe C. Rowe, city counselor, has declared his candidacy, though he has not filed certificate. Meanwhile, former Representative Linwood Clark, originally from the Second Congressional District, is being urged by friends to withdraw his candidacy for United States Senate and run for judge.

Allegany Sheriff Race Hot.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 6 (Spl.—With a fifth candidate just entered, the race for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff in Allegany County promises to be one of the most exciting situations of the Democratic primary campaign.

The latest candidate is Joseph M. Fradiska, custodian of the rooms of Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion and a musician of note, who was a regimental band leader in the World War. Others who have announced are Samuel T. Weatherholt, Paul Ritter and Simon K. Carroll, Cumberland, and Ira T. Ryan, Westernport.

The situation is interesting in view of the fact that it was difficult in the past to get one man to run. Generally there would be no entrant in the primary and the State Central committee would name a man to fill the vacancy on the ballot.

The latest entry for the Republican nomination for sheriff is Winfred McKenry, formerly of Lonaconing, proprietor of the Triple Lakes amusement resort and former widely-known basket ball player.

Theodore F. Shaeffer, this city, confidant of Representative David J. Lewis, former city tax collector, and widely known in coal circles, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for clerk to the county commissioners.

Chief Judge John Scott, sr., of the Allegany County Orphans Court, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for reelection. Judge Scott, who lives at Lonaconing, is the oldest member of the bench, having served ten years.

Casteel Is Garrett Entry.

Oakland, Md., Aug. 5 (Spl.).—William D. Casteel is the latest to announce his candidacy in a large field for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Garrett County, at the primary September 12. In 1926 Mr. Casteel was elected sheriff. Previously he was a deputy sheriff and motorcycle officer.

Jasper C. Myers, farmer and World War veteran, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for House of Delegates. He served overseas in the 313th Infantry.

Charles F. Hammond, Oakland, has announced as a candidate for the Republican nomination for judge of the Orphans Court. In recent years he has been crier of the Garrett County Circuit Court.

Dry Stronghold Ballots Today On Wet Issue

Rockingham County First in Virginia to Vote on Question.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—Residents of Rockingham County, long a stronghold of Virginia drys, will vote tomorrow in the State's first county referendum on the alcoholic beverage control act. The City of Harrisonburg will not be affected by the county vote, as it polled a wet majority at the last election. A liquor store will open there this week.

Under the control act, those counties, cities or towns which voted dry last year are given an opportunity to re-express their opinion on the question of adopting provisions of the control measure. In Danville such an election resulted in a wet victory.

Rockingham County, the seat of several church organizations strongly opposed to liquor, wine and beer, is expected to vote dry.

Voters will be given an opportunity to express themselves on two questions—the establishment of State liquor stores and the sale of beer of more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol. Only two communities, Bridgewater and Elkton, are large enough to support liquor stores. The election thus resolves itself into a test of opinion on the beer question.

42 Stores Operating In Virginia Cities

Richmond, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Forty-two stores are now being operated by the State alcoholic beverage control board, and it is planned to establish four more this week, it was learned today.

The stores to be established this week will be at Culpeper, Harrisonburg, Winchester and Warrenton.

How long it will take the board to complete its establishment of stores is a matter of conjecture, it is stated. The board originally estimated that there would be about 100 stores. All probably will be in operation before next spring.

The gross business of the board for July was $675,000. This figure covers revenue from approximately 35 stores.

Assuming the volume of business will continue at this rate, the gross business for the present fiscal year would be about $8,000,000. A gross business of $15,000,000 to $16,000,000 would be necessary, however, to net the board $1,675,000, as estimated by the Assembly last year. As new stores are constantly being added, the figure may not be an impossible one.

Motor-Boat Hit-Run Operator Is Sought

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County police, headed by Sheriff R. Glenn Prout, are unting for the driver of a motor boat who yesterday ran down and seriously injured Norman Stiles, 39, automobile salesman, of Baltimore, in Upper Severn River.

Stiles' left leg was so badly mangled it was amputated below the knee. His right leg also was badly torn. Physicians are doubtful of his recovery.

Stiles was swimming in the river near Whitney's Landing when the accident occurred. Witnesses said the speed boat made no effort to stop. Other persons swimming nearby aided Stiles and conveyed him to the hospital.

West Virginia Office Seekers End Campaigns

Party Races Promise to Make New Deal November Issue.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 6 (AP). West Virginia voters tomorrow will settle Republican and Democratic primary elections, which promise to bring forth President Roosevelt's "New Deal" as a clear-cut issue in the State's senatorial ballotting in November.

Nine Democratic candidates tonight closed campaigns in which all have pledged their support to the President and his program.

By contrast, the Republican camps were quiet, as they have been throughout the campaign, and party leaders looked for little strength to develop in the primary against Senator Henry D. Hatfield, the incumbent, fiery opponent of many Administration measures. Four candidates are running against him.

Clem Shaver, who managed the unsuccessful presidential campaign of his old friend, John W. Davis, resigned as assistant chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to enter the Democratic race. Prominent among his opponents are W. E. Chilton, Charleston publisher, who served as a Senator during the first Woodrow Wilson Administration, and Rush D. Holt, a 29-year-old legislator.

Democratic candidates, in addition to Shaver, Chilton and Holt, are J. Alfred Taylor, former Representative; Arthur B. Koontz, nominee for Governor in 1920; Graham Sale, an attorney; Edmund M. Conaway, Elbert E. Caldwell and John W. Caldwell.

Those opposing Senator Hatfield, none of whom has engaged in active campaigns, are Benjamin L. Rosenbloom, former Representative; Hattie Stein, Washington I. Kilpatrick, and Dr. George M. Fisher.

Voters also will choose candidates for six seats in the House of Representatives, 16 seats in the State Senate, and the full membership of the House of Delegates.

Office Seeker Thumbs Rides On Speech Tour

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 6 (AP). G. A. Bryant, who says he will jump from the Washington Monument if President Roosevelt asks him to, has conducted an active "hitch-hiking" campaign for the Democratic nomination to Congress in the Fifth West Virginia District.

He has made speeches in seven counties, thumbing rides along the way. Bryant received donations of $19.75. He said he has 6 cents left on election eve.

'Old Dunkard Church' Is Sold At Public Auction for $550

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—The huge frame "Old Dunkard Church," which seated more than 500 persons and for 30 years was the seat of worship of the Bridgewater Church of the Brethren, one of the largest congregations in Rockingham County, has been sold at public auction for $550. The purchase included 2 acres of land in a grove.

J. Hershel Ringgold, of Spring Creek, was the purchaser. The sale must be confirmed by the congregation. Because of the low price, the congregation may decide to keep the property.

The Bridgewater congregation decided to sell the old church because it was no longer needed. The members now worship in the College Street Church on the Bridgewater College campus. This was erected in 1915.

The "Old Dunkard Church" was constructed of native pine hewed out by church members. The dedicatory services in 1878 were attended by 3,000 persons. The Rev. Solomon Garber was the principal speaker at the edifice which later was to become a Bridgewater landmark.

How to Make Fish Race Sets Baltimore Suburb Puzzling

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (AP).—How to make a racing fish swim—or a swimming fish race—when the fish has no urge to travel, was the big problem of the Brooklyn Boosters Association blow-out committee today.

The fish race had been scheduled for the annual carnival at Brooklyn, a Baltimore suburb, next month. Plans for the 30-foot track-tank were complete. Then someone threw cold water on the fish with the suggestion that when the starting screens were drawn and the fish faced the straightaway, they might not be interested.

Can a fish smell food 30 feet away? Will a fish do or die for dear old Brooklyn, anyway?

Such were the questions which racked the committeemen's brain.

Heating the water was suggested, but the committee didn't like that. Since mice and cockroach racing became standard at firemen's carnivals hereabouts, some of the tracks have acquired a shady reputation from that sort of thing.

There was a big howl last year when the backers of also-ran roaches found that the tin track of the alley occupied by the long-shot winner had been heated by a gentleman with a candle parked underneath.

Sudden Squall Upsets Sloop; Four Rescued

Caught in Gust of Wind, Boat Capsizes in Chesapeake Bay.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—Four persons were rescued from the sailing sloop Dusty Weather which capsized in a sudden squall yesterday afternoon off Bloody Point Light and later was found floating in Chesapeake Bay, it was learned here today.

Those rescued were Mr. and Mrs. Robert I. Welsh, of Millersville, Md., owners of the sloop; Woodward Welsh, brother of Robert Welsh, and Basil Storrs, both of Elizabeth, N. J.

The four attended the Miles River regatta and were returning from St. Michaels to Annapolis when the storm broke. The boat was becalmed for a short time and then was caught in a strong gust of wind.

Mrs. Robert A. Welsh, mother of Robert Welsh, said the party was in the wafer from 30 to 45 minutes. She said Mrs. Welsh and Storrs had just stepped into the cabin out of the rain when the boat went over. Storrs pushed the hatch back and both succeeded in getting into the open. All four were good swimmers.

A fishing boat from the fleet of Capt. Robert H. Lee, of Shady Side, rescued the quartet and took them to Capt. Lee's home. His son later took them to the Welsh home at Millersville.

East Charges Grain Dumping

Baltimore Is Aroused by Wheat From Pacific Northwest.

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (AP).—Baltimore wheat dealers and the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, center of the local wheat market, said today that wheat was being "dumped" in the East by Pacific Northwest growers at a heavy cost to Eastern farmers.

Blame was placed on the lifting of a 15-cent-a-bushel tax at the Panama Canal by order of the last Congress, as well as low water rates to Southeastern ports.

"Due to the rate situation," said W. C. Gibson, traffic manager of the chamber of commerce, "grain dealers in the Pacific Northwest can put wheat in Southern territory on a basis under the rates from Baltimore, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia, as well as the Central Freight Association and the Trans-Mississippi territories."

E. H. Beer, jr., member of a leading Baltimore wheat firm, estimated Eastern farmers were being forced to sell their wheat at 10 cents a bushel lower because of the influx.

Farmers, dealers and Millers are widely alarmed, Gibson said, especially since the West Coast port strikes ended. Some 50,000,000 bushels of Pacific Coast wheat, held up by the strikes, can now be poured into the East, he said.

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Tanks, field guns and various other instruments of modern warfare descended upon Baltimore today as Company L of the Sixty-ninth Division, United States Army, pitched camp on the grounds of the Maryland Yacht Club at Broening Park, on the Patapsco River.

The soldiers were the vanguard of the military forces which will supplement naval detachments assigned to aid the yact club in staging its twenty-fifth annual regatta, opening Thursday. Company L is from Camp Meade, and will remain in Baltimore until next Tuesday.

The soldiers pitched 100 tents for the accommodation of hundreds of visiting yachtsmen expected to attend the regatta. Cannon were brought by the soldiers for firing salutes.

The regatta, one of the most elaborate ever staged in Maryland waters, will attract thousands of boating enthusiasts here. Many races and several parades are scheduled. This being Maryland's tercentenary year, the yacht club also is celebrating the State's 300th birthday.

Woman Jails 2 She Says Beat, Robbed Her

Charges Men Companions on Automobile Trip Abandoned Her.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Charged with beating and robbing a 22-year-old woman they had agreed to drive to New York, Thomas A. Tobin, 33, of Virginia Beach, and Frank Destornk, 30, of Norfolk, were arrested here today after assertedly abandoning the woman 18 miles south of here on the Richmond-Washington highway.

Miss Irene Dodson charged that she was beaten, robbed, and thrown out of the car when she refused to give the men additional funds for gasoline. Miss Dodson telephoned Fredericksburg police from a highway filling station, and the police intercepted the men here.

Miss Dodson told police today that she had agreed to share expenses with the two men, who, she said, were old acquaintances, on a trip to New York from Norfolk. They purchased liquor at Richmond, she said, and were drinking heavily throughout the journey.

After paying more than $5 for gasoline, Miss Dodson declared she refused to provide any more money. Her companions attempted to wrest her pocketbook from her, and when she resisted struck her several times about the face, she said. Tobin and Destornk stopped the car, pulled her to the roadside, and drove off with her money, baggage, and some jewelry, she charged.

Tobin and Destornk were removed to Bowling Green, county seat of Caroline County, the jurisdiction in which the assault is alleged to have occurred.

Reckord, commanding officer of the division, addressed the staff for the first time since assuming command. He formerly was brigadier general, commanding the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, Maryland National Guard, but was placed at the head of the Twenty-ninth Division on the death last March of the late Maj. Upon reaching Indiantown, the planes carried out an artillery adjustment mission with the Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade, using heavy guns. Lieut. Archibald, of the Twenty-ninth Division, was stationed on the ground as liaison officer.

Central Bank For U. S. Fiscal IssuesProposed

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Creation of a central bank of issue, which would take over functions of the Federal Reserve System and lodge control of credit and currency directly with the Government, was said by officials yesterday to be a proposal under consideration for presentation to the next Congress.

The matter probably will be presented to President Roosevelt upon his return to the Capital. The House Banking Committee last session was prepared to report a measure for a central monetary authority, but the plan was dropped after a trip to the White House.

Secretary Morgenthau opposed similar measures last session, asking more time to determine Treasury policy with regard to a central bank.

Depends on Events.

Curtailment of the Federal Reserve's authority long has been considered desirable by some Administration elements, but it was said presence on the calendar of other important financial and banking measures prevented any such legislation being enacted last session.

Some officials and many members of Congress take the position now that banking and monetary legislation already passed has been sufficiently "digested" for steps toward the central bank measure.

Whether the program as finally drawn will seek actually to abolish the mechanism within which the Nation's banking has functioned for two decades, officials said, may depend on developments between now and January 1.

The proposed change is regarded as of particular importance because of the prospect of continued heavy Government borrowing for refunding and emergency expenditures. These will approximate $10,000,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

Question Profit Motive.

Treasury officials agree they have had the entire cooperation of the Reserve and member banks. They point out, however, that if emergency expenditures were found necessary over a longer period than at first contemplated, the attitude of the Reserve banks toward Government securities might be a deciding factor in maintenance of the Nation's credit.

Proponents of a central Governmental banking authority, however, do not base their stand on this possibility. They challenge particularly the "profit motive" of the Reserve banks, ownership of which is vested with the member institutions throughout the country. This, they say, tends to encourage policies advantageous to the banks, rather than those in the interest of National welfare.

Program Still Tentative.

The proposals to be submitted to the next Congress are still in a tentative stage.

Among suggestions being studied and from which some clauses may be taken is the Federal monetary authority bill which was introduced in the last session. It would create a Governmental authority of seven appointed by the President and having exclusive control over the issuance of currency and the contraction or expansion of credit.

The Federal Reserve's future has been discussed unofficially in connection with the prospective retirement of Governor Eugene R. Black.

Marriner S. Eccles, special assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Black.

He was standing near the stove when Private Ponagopolulous used the kerosene to build up the fire. The oil flared, igniting Fisher's clothing and burning his right hand, arm, and leg.

Sack Firm Is Cited Before NRA Heads

Pays 5 Cents an Hour for Labor, Investigator Says.

Richmond, Aug. 6 (AP).—Representatives of the Millhiser Bag Co., a Richmond firm engaged in the manufacture of tobacco sacks, have been cited to appear before NRA officials in Washington August 15 to show cause why the company should not comply with minimum wage provisions of the textile code.

The company "farms out" the labor of placing draw-strings in the tiny tobacco sacks, the work being done mainly by old people at home. The pay-rate for the work has been fixed at about 5 cents per hour by John J. Connolly, deputy NRA code administrator, who investigated the firm's activities.

Officials of the company maintain that the work constitutes only about 75 per cent of their business and that many elderly persons will be thrown out of employment if the firm is forced to adopt a high wage scale.

Federal Relief Plan Changes Held Unlikely

FERA Officials Doubt Revival of CWA by Administration.

The latest appeal for a revival of CWA was met yesterday by word from FERA officials that it was unlikely any change will be made in present relief methods this winter.

William Green, president of the American Federaton of Labor, at Atlantic City advocated that the Civil Works Administration be revived to combat unemployment.

The CWA was operated with $400,000,000 of Public Works Administration funds supplemented by about $200,000,000 relief money. It was discontinued last May when funds ran out.

Officials said the Relief Administration now is providing work relief that is much the same as the CWA, except that work is provided on the basis of need, instead of unemployment. Last winter the criterion was simply joblessness.

The Relief Administration recently put 400,000 men to work on projects of various kinds in the drought area. There are about 1,000,000 others on work relief in other sections of the country.

Abuses grew up under the Civil Works Administration which have resulted in several indictments. While Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, who is now in Europe, would not comment at the time, CWA was disbanded, the situation irked him and he concluded that it would be better to leave the relief situation in the hands of State relief commissions. The Federal Administration has no hand in actively administering relief, but serves in an advisory capacity and checks up periodically.

The Administration allocates money to the States, specifying in many instances what forms of relief different sums are to provide for.

Marylander Slain In Row Over Fruit

Cumberland Suspect Says Victim Attacked Him.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Hobart Lawrence, 33, who operates a garage at Green Ridge, 20 miles east of here, was lodged in jail here tonight, charged with slaying Victor Smith, 60.

The pair had been into Pennsylvania after pears and a dispute arose over division of two sacks of the fruit after they returned. Lawrence who waited arrest at his home, declared Smith attacked him with a stone and knife and he fired a shotgun charge into his heart. Lawrence's wife and relatives witnessed the shooting.

Smith's body was lying beside the road when Deputy Sheriff J. W. Price, County Investigator Terrace J. Boyle and City Officer Frank A. Shober, jr., arrived. An inquest will be held.

Virginian Railway Hearing Is Postponed

Richmond, Aug. 6 (AP).—The State corporation commission today continued until August 27 its hearing of argument on an application for schedule changes by the Virginian Railway. The move came after a hearing today at which some testimony had been heard.

The road seeks permission to rearrange the running time of two of its trains. Under the new plan train No. 3, which now leaves Norfolk for Roanoke at 9:45 a. m., would leave Norfolk at 7 a. m. Train No. 4, which now leaves Roanoke for Norfolk at 8:15 a. m., would leave at 3:30 p. m.

Electric Rate Cut Parley Is Planned in Arlington

After receiving a letter from J. S. Avery, president of the Virginia Public Service Co., indicating his willingness to confer with Arlington County officials on the question of reducing electric combination rates, the county public utilities commission voted last night to arrange a meeting after August 23.

C. I. Kephart, chairman of the commission, said a cut in rates is sought not only where electric ranges and refrigerators are used, but also where other electric motors are in use.

Leesburg Robbery Suspect Is Caught

Bonneville, Coulee Power Use Sought

National Policy Group Studying Situation.

The problem of what to do with the hydroelectric power to be developed at the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams will be considered by the National Power Policy Committee in connection with its Nation-wide study, it was stated in authoritative quarters yesterday.

The committee, appointed a month ago, has already started work on a program of research outlined at a meeting with Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes before he left on vacation.

It has established quarters in the Interior Departmnet Building, and is engaged in organizing an administrative staff. During the absence of Secretary Ickes, Morris L. Cooke, of the Mississippi Valley Authority of PWA, is in charge as vice chairman.

Ickes Delays Return Here Until August 15

Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who has been on a vacation for more than two weeks, will not return to Washington with President Roosevelt, as formerly announced, PWA officials said yesterday.

They indicated Secretary Ickes' vacation probably will extend until August 15, officials said. Ickes joined the Presidential party last week and will presumably remain with it until all PWA projects have been inspected.

First Insull Executive Will Face Jury Today

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Despite his preference for a trial by judge, Marshall E. Sampsell, first of the Insull executives to be tried in criminal court, will face a jury tomorrow, to defend the charge that he embezzled $400,000 of his company's stock.

Sampsell formerly was president of the Central Illinois Public Service Co. He retired after the exposure of the alleged steal. The 4,000 shares of Treasury stock were missed by auditors after the collapse of the Insull companies, and Sampsell is accused of using the securities as collateral on a private loan.

Southern Building Shows Increase

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (AP).—Figures compiled by the Manufacturers Record today showed construction in 16 Southern States increased 50 per cent in July over June, and 75 per cent over July of 1933. For the first seven months of the year construction showed a gain of 100 per cent over the same period last year.

In July contracts totaled $41,051,000, against $27,263,000 in June, and $23,158,000 in July of 1933, while figures for the first seven months of this year totaled $303,000,000 with proposed work aggregating more than $500,000,000 as compared with total contracts of $151,646,000 let during the first seven months of 1933.

The number of projects started weekly increased from an average of 150 during the latter part of 1933 and the first part of 1934 to 250 a week.

Symons Urges Stable Policy For Farmers

Plan Would Put All on Assured Basis of Income.

A permanent policy for Agriculture, to succeed the emergency measures now in operation, is being urged by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Before a recent meeting of the Carroll County (Md.) Farm Bureau, he outlined a plan by which all commodities might be marketed along the general lines of the plan now being successfully followed in marketing dairy products.

The outline included provision for payment of a so-called basic price for a specified quota of all farm commodities, and sale of any surplus above that quota at such price as the market will pay.

Dr. Symons expressed the opinion that it is entirely feasible to develop a method whereby farmers may be assured, in advance of planting, of a parity price for production on a specified acreage of the several farm commodities.

While there would be no limit on production, he said, there would be no assurance as to prices for products over and above the amounts produced on the acreage included in the quota.

Announcement of a basic price in advance of planting, he declared, would be a patent factor in adjusting production to demand.

An ample supply of farm products at all times is of vital concern to all people, he asserted, and it is to the interest of people generally to see a reasonable return to those who produce them.

This principle has become established in the emergency programs now in effect. It is important that serious consideration be given farmers and others to work out a permanent policy whereby the farming industry may be kept on a sound foundation, he said.

Rum Smuggler Suspect Forfeits $100,000 Bond

Seattle, Aug. 6 (AP).—The $100,000 surety bond of George Reifel, son of Henry Reifel, wealthy Canadian distiller and brewer, was ordered forfeited today when the younger Reifel failed to appear for arraignment on a Federal indictment charging a liquor smuggling conspiracy. The court granted Henry Reifel a continuance until August 20 of his arraignment.

At Vancouver, B. C., meanwhile, Mrs. Florence A. Wills, sister of George Reifel, and daughter of Henry Reifel, won an injunction forbidding the Royal Bank of Canada from paying $200,000 to the American Bonding Co. of Baltimore, which furnished their bonds.

An Unknown Officer.

Critics may be of two minds about most of the leading figures in Central Europe's embroilment, but one figure at least, who led only for a moment, has earned golden opinions from all men. A soldier by profession, he has won a victory by preventing, or at any rate postponing, any appeal to the arbitrament of battle—victory by the application of uncommon common sense.

Dispatches from the Austrian-Yugoslav border tell the story. There a little force of Austrian Nazis held a position from which their opposing fellow-countrymen could dislodge them solely by artillery fire. But the shells were certain to cross the border and cause casualties among the Jugoslav troops stationed at that point.

An unidentified major of King Alexander's army called the Nazis' attention to this. Said he, in effect: "Such casualties might mean a European war. You don't want to be responsible for that, do you? Retreat from your position come on over here and be interned." He spoke without any order from higher up except his government's general caution to prevent "incidents." But there was no denying the danger which he pointed out—and he persuaded his audience.

It was an instance of constructive initiative not to be forgotten. When at last the Nazis cease from troubling and the Heimwehr are at rest, a minimum of three nations—Austria, Italy and Yugoslavia—might well erect a monument to this unknown officer.

The Parks Are All Right.

During the President's absence from the continental United States the problems that he left behind him have not diminished in number, nor become easier to solve. The general strike in San Francisco has been settled, but in other parts of the country industrial relationships reveal a growing tenseness. The drought is not broken and the devastation which it has brought is creating new difficulties with the passage of each day. Mounting costs, and uncertainty regarding the future are retarding business recovery. Hence, the public has been hoping for a clearer definition of administration policies and above all for some evidence that the gravity of the situation is appreciated by those in power.

Yet President Roosevelt confined his address of Sunday night almost exclusively to the subject of our National park policies, discoursing upon their scenic beauties and recreational facilities with an exuberance that would do credit to a publicity agent. In happier times his auditors would have asked no more from a President visiting in one of the Nation's most superb playgrounds. Under present circumstances, however, the parks appear to have afforded an escape from the discussion of topics much nearer to the hearts of the people.

The closest approach to these more immediate problems was found in the President's characterization of the struggle to obtain and retain the park properties against the opposition of private interests. "We are," he said, "at the threshold of an even more important battle to save our resources of agriculture and industry against the selfishness of individuals."

Whatever this obscure reference was intended to mean, it was an understatement. We are not on the threshold, we are in the midst, of a battle to save American resources from being riotously squandered, and so far it is a losing battle. The exigencies of this struggle will keep quite a fair proportion of the population from trailing off to the National parks as the President urges, "with all the earnestness at my command."

In fairness to these unfortunate stay-at-homes perhaps Mr. Roosevelt, in his next radio address, will be a little more specific and helpful. After a month of repose and contemplation, a somewhat more impressive mouse might properly have emerged from the mountain at Glacier National Park.

The Most Important Question.

The National Economic League is an organization whose membership is recruited from representative groups throughout the country with a view to creating through its council an "informed and disinterested leadership for public opinion." As the organization is free from partisan bias and represents no particular class of citizens, it is instructive to note the results of a poll to determine what members consider the most important question before the country at the present time.

Heading the list with a vote of 1,172 was the subject, "Efficiency and Economy in Government," followed by "The Administration's Recovery Measures," with a vote of 1,014. "Organized Crime" came third (vote 963) and "Taxation," fourth (941). "Questions of Monetary Policy" stood in fifth place with a vote of only 724, while "Banking and Credit," "Federal Budget and Finances," and "Inflated Debts" were rated much lower in order of importance.

Although replies to questionnaires of this sort do not always reflect public opinion at large, they indicate what a number of especially alert and intelligent people are thinking and worrying about. Undoubtedly, economical and efficient government, Federal State and local, would remove many social and economic disorders which are due to political bungling and poor executive management. The existence of organized crime, for instance, testifies to a widespread breakdown of law enforcement, which really efficient administrations would not tolerate. Waste and extravagance in government create monetary, budgetary, and banking problems which might not arise at all, if public affairs were conducted on an economical basis. In short, the best laid plans for coping with specific evils will miscarry if the basic political organism is not functioning properly.

The National Economic League appears, therefore, to have placed first things first in putting efficiency and economy in government at the head of its list of problems. Its next inquiry is how to formulate a plan to bring about effective action to improve governmental standards. That raises an issue of paramount importance which obviously can not be solved by the questionnaire method alone.

Where Was The Cupidity?

In a report dealing with investment banking practices the Senate Banking and Currency Committee unsparingly denounces the abuses that have resulted from the "incompetence, negligence, irresponsibility or cupidity of individuals in the profession." The report further describes the activities of bankers in the foreign field as "one of the most scandalous chapters in the history of American investment banking."

This unrestrained language is none too strong when applied to certain notorious instances of violation of what the committee calls the "most elementary principles of business ethics." The exposure of dishonest and obviously unethical practices, and the professional elimination of men who have followed such practices is imperative.

Nevertheless, it would be a great mistake to conclude that the losses suffered by American investors, following years of unprecedented business and financial expansion, were due solely or even chiefly to the culpable activities of some investment bankers. Barring certain cases of fraud and deliberate misrepresentation, the investment bankers—like the investors, the industrialists, the wage earners and the farmers—were the victims as much as the promoters of pre-depression psychology.

The country will not be saved from future investment losses, moreover, by Congressional post-mortems seeking scapegoats upon whom to place the blame for the costly errors of the past. Dishonest and ignorant promoters have flourished in this country largely because public opinion tolerated, even encouraged, them when speculative profits and ridiculous interest rates were dangled before avaricious eyes. The uncritical optimism of the boom period was responsible for the rise of a type of banker-salesman who had not been trained to the profession, and who did not regard his position as one of trust. The promotional activities of such men broke down established standards and weakened the influence of the responsible elements.

In short, the emphasis upon individual wrongdoing as the cause of the disasters which have overtaken investors is decidedly exaggerated, although the committee has performed a most valuable service in exposing the mental and moral deficiencies of some erstwhile leaders in the investment banking field.

Regulatory laws directed against specific abuses and punitive action to discipline wrongdoers have been shown to be essential. But nothing is gained by emotionalizing over the losses of gamblers who were all too happy with their speculative purchases so long as these provided the quick profits which they were greedily seeking.

A Neglected Subject.

On the basis of information obtained from several hundred institutions of higher learning, the committee on citizenship of the American Bar Association concludes that our colleges and universities should give more time to a study of the Constitution, its history and its philosophy as a scheme of government. Evidently the members of the committee were amazed, and disturbed by evidences of a professional lack of interest in this instrument of government. Scarcely any college, it appears, offers courses of study in the Constitution for periods of even half a scholastic year, except in the law schools.

In the opinion of the committee, the subject should be given a more prominent place in the curriculum and should be made a continuous study for at least two consecutive college years. "It is obviously more important," the report asserts, "that the educated American should understand something of the Constitution than it is that he should acquire a working knowledge of astronomy or any of the natural sciences."

While this is ex parte opinion, which astronomers and other scientists may properly resent, a better public knowledge of the Constitution, what it is, how it came to be, and what it means under present-day conditions, is undoubtedly needed. But the study is not one that can be pursued far by immature minds, and propaganda has no place in institutions of higher learning. If more courses on government are to be introduced into our colleges, therefore, they should be fitted into the program with care. Above all they must be objective and critical, rather than attempts to make "good citizens," or to prove the superiority of our own to foreign institutions.

Student enthusiasm for the principles of our Government will not be increased by introducing into elective college curricula required courses in that subject extending over a period of one or two years. That would be equivalent to linking freedom with tyranny, and would undo the results of the best teaching. Give students more opportunities for voluntary study of governmental principles, and better teaching in that field. These will automatically eliminate the cause for the reproach which the Bar Association has levelled at our educational institutions.

Abrogation Discussion.

Little encouragement for the cause of naval disarmament can be found in the dispatches which reach this country from the capitals of other nations bound by the present ratios. Officials in Paris now are quoted as desiring a lapse of the Washington Treaty on the ground that France must be in a position to outbuild Italy. While this is the period at which every government may be expected to magnify its dissatisfaction with present arrangements, the French attitude is none the less disquieting.

The immediate effect of any action toward abrogation by France undoubtedly would be to strengthen Japan's hand in demanding parity with the United States and Great Britain. And anything approximating a joint denunciation of present ratios by both France and Japan would render any reestablishment of limitations by next year's conference the more difficult.

Less cause for pessimism is to be found in the outburst against restriction emitted by Lord Beatty, former first sea lord of the British admiralty, who told a Navy Week audience that Britain must repudiate the restrictions on unlimited British building. Lord Beatty is an avowedly "big navy" man of the type all too familiar in every country, and his government has given ample evidence that it favors continuation of limitation. Being in the same favored position as ourselves there is no good reason why London should not uphold the present ratios.

But with powerful elements in both France and Japan, especially the latter, urging abrogation, the situation is not pleasant. Of course, there is nothing sacrosanct about the present ratios and they may well stand some alteration. But if each nation is to be the sole judge of its needs, with each inclined to overstate them in order to impress the other parties, it is doubtful if any satisfactory agreement will emerge. The desire for it will not be present.

In the event of complete disagreement a naval race of immense proportions would probably be promptly under way. The only limitation then would be the ability of each nation to build, and pay for building. In such case the United States could probably outstrip all other contenders, and this would scarcely be what any other capital desires. Knowledge of this possibility may be an effective barrier to abrogation of the Washington ratios. But one could wish that other restraining factors were more prominent.

You Can't Win.

Innumerable lonely hearts owe the New York Herald Tribune a debt of gratitude. A reporter of that estimable compendium of useful knowledge has discovered, upon excellent authority, that no matter how long you play Canfield in the silence of your lonely room, you can't win.

It was 20 years ago that Richard Canfield died, best known of the gamblers who fell victim to the prosecution of William Travers Jerome. At that time, the newspaper reveals, a man named Robert S. Sutliffe was struck with the curious wonder as to what the chances of winning the game of solitaire named for the gambler really were. In the good old days Canfield cost $50 a deck to play the game at the suave Richard's gilded palace, and stood the player a chance of winning $210—if he "went out."

It took Mr. Sutliffe a long time to learn the answer and the method of learning is a lesson in perseverance, if nothing else, although we rather suspect the latter. In those 20 years he played 63,000 games of Canfield, which is a lot of Canfield. In a little black book he kept continual score. Of that total number of games, had he been playing for money, he would have lost a total of $5 a game, for his average center table play was nine cards. And so his conclusion that you can't win!

The story says that Mr. Sutliffe is not a mathematician. Well, neither are we. But our calculations lead us to believe that in 20 years Mr. Sutliffe has totaled a paper loss of some $315,000. And so, as we said, the lonely hearts at the Canfield table owe the newspaper which revealed all this a debt. For it puts them at once in the class of the big-timers. It's mighty few poker or bridge players who can go around boasting of an average $5 loss for every game they play, and still be out of pocket no more than the cost of an occasional deck of cards and some patience.

The profit your employer makes on your work is the amount you pay for having some one tell you what to do.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

WAR FEVER RAN high in Tokyo. It was reported that reserve army officers had been instructed to hold themselves in readiness for mobilization; a flying squadron of seven cruisers was organized at Yokosuka, and the battleship squadron was increased to eight vessels and was ready for service.

GERMANY PROPOSED to the Italian government that Italy would receive Algeria and the Belgian Kongo as the price of her active support of Germany and Austria, but Italy remained neutral.

IT WAS OFFICIALLY stated that there were 80,000 German soldiers before Liege and, according to a special dispatch from Brussels, the German troops acknowledged the loss of 25,000 men. The French army entered Belgium and advanced well into the country. The Belgians granted the Germans before Liege a 24-hour armistice.

HEAVY FIRING of great volume and at short intervals, lasting more than an hour, was reported 60 miles southeast of Scotland lightship off New York.

THE CUNARD liner, Lusitania, speeding to England, wirelessed back to New York that "all was well," but did not give her position.

Puts Faith in More Laws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is to be hoped the loyal people of the United States may learn from the recent strike in San Francisco and cities of the Pacific Coast, and others still continuing in different sections of the country, the lesson which has proved the warnings and prophecies of the patriotic societies and affiliated organizations made for years.

These societies and organizations have been called alarmists, radicals, professional patriots, self-appointed guardians of loyalty, laughed at, held up to scorn and derision by groups of indifferent Americans—pacifists and organizations sponsored by Communists.

When will the law-abiding majority in the United States decide to clean house? When will laws be passed which will guard and protect America? Laws which protect the people of the United States against the minority of Communists, racketeers, habitual criminals, agents of foreign countries, all of whom wish or try to control and run the United States by force rather than have it governed by law? Immortal Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mrs. Roosevelt says that in future rich people will not be able to give so much away to public institutions. It seems they gave $2,500,000,000 in 1929. She thinks that people with ordinary incomes will have to support the colleges, the churches and the musuems.

There may be a way to prevent people from making money, but the only known way is through taxation. Taxes can take the initiative away from the average business man even faster than a depression. Depressions come to an end, but nobody ever heard of an end to taxes. The depression curve is headed downward, but the tax curve is upward bound. Perhaps Mrs. Roosevelt means that there will be no further rich men's donations to colleges, &c., because the Government will take their surplus in taxes. If so, on the eve of an election, it is like shouting "Remember your rent!" to a man about to order another bottle of champagne. C. E. CARPENTER.

It's Growing!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial of August 2, headed "Bathos," reference is made to former President Hoover's prediction that "grass would grow in the streets of our cities if he should fail of reelection."

Whether due to that cause or another, certain it is that anyone passing along P street northwest, between Thirty-first street and Wisconsin avenue, will find that "classic" prediction literally fulfilled; as there may be found a crop of grass sufficient to make a fairly good lawn now growing between the Belgian blocks with which that block is paved.

Action!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I think it is apparent that very little effort is being made by the receiver to collect assets of the Federal-American Bank. If some active interest is not taken by depositors they will likely realize little more on their accounts.

We should demand that a more active receiver be appointed, or that some active industrious lawyer be employed to collect the accounts, and that a part of the horde of clerks and employes be discharged. Depositors should call a meeting and get active. M. M. ALBERT.

Washington, July 30.

Dog Days.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Many persons who have pet dogs do not know how to take care of them in hot weather. Every summer there are many poor animals killed, as mad, which are suffering only from the heat due to indifferent care.

In hot weather dogs that are allowed to run at large or are compelled to stay out in the heat will often have running fits or convulsions, sometimes foaming at the mouth. When a dog is found in such a state, the procedure recommended by authorities is to get him into a cool, dark room or cellar, throwing a blanket around him, if necessary, to avoid bites, and leave him there with a pan of cool water. If he does not recover in a reasonable time, then call a veterinarian or the humane society.

A cellar or basement is the best place for dogs during the heat of the day and one should never forget that they need drinking water more than ever in hot weather. One feeding a day is enough and it should contain green vegetables and milk as well as meat. If a dog is properly fed, kept clean, and has a proper place to sleep and stay during the heat of the day, he will cause no trouble.

Still a Democracy.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I be permitted to express my disapproval of the letter by F. Vetter in the July 28 issue, entitled "New Deal and Henry II?"

A partial truth like this often does more harm than an absolute mis-statement.

Mr. Roosevelt and Henry II are not at all alike. The whole article smacks of the indolent, half-expressed longing for a dictator in our own country, which one runs across so disagreeably, of late, almost everywhere. The fine, self-reliant spirit of our people seems to be weakening. The old Anglo-Saxon heart, with its inborn passion for liberty, would have tolerated no such foolishness as this.

Now Henry II was a good king, as kings go. To him we are indebted for the system of trial-by-jury, and many other fine things. But let us not try to compare him to Roosevelt.

"It seemed to him natural to trample either baronage or Church underfoot, in order to gain prosperity," quotes Mr. Vetter, and suggests we should read "House and Senate" instead of "baronage" and "Church."

I for one decline to do so.

And I feel certain that the patriotic Mr. Roosevelt himself would vigorously repudiate any such thought.

Whether we approve entirely of the New Deal or not (which is beside the point), let us get clearly into our heads the difference between Mr. Roosevelt and a dictator.

We still bask in the blessed sun of Democracy. When we have sunk into the black pit of dictatorship—ah, then, if we wish, we may speak of Henry II—but not aloud. We shall have to whisper it.

Bobbie Caraway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the death of the youngest of her three splendid sons, Senator Hattie W. Caraway has the sincere sympathy of the entire Nation.

Bobbie Caraway was one of the most lovable young men I ever met. At the reception which followed the wedding of his brother, Lieut. Paul Caraway, Mrs. Brough and I talked with this happy youth, who was the replica of his distinguished father, Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway. His lovely mother literally beamed with pride at the sight of him. His tragic death at Dyersburg, Tenn., on July 31, came as a distinct shock to the thousands of friends of the Caraway family. Bobbie was ambitious, yet considerate of the feelings of others. He radiated happiness and good will, and he was the exemplar of all that is best in American young manhood.

Mrs. Caraway as the first lady United States Senator in the history of the Nation to have been elected for the full term of six years, and who is filling the high station with distinction and honor to Arkansas and the Nation, has an Atlean burden to bear in the loss within less than three years of her distinguished husband and her "baby boy." May a merciful Heavenly Father keep her in the hollow of His divine hand to guard, guide and protect her through the years. And may she be comforted in this Gethsemane of her well-spent life by the thought that Bobbie's life, like that of her able husband's career, will be "as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the coming of the perfect day."

As Others See It.

Mr. Hoover's Book.

Herbert Hoover is said to be writing a book, analytical of the times, to be published between now and the Congressional elections. This may be interpreted as a campaign gesture, but it should not be. If its conclusions should be of such a nature that the Republican leaders should attempt to use it as a campaign document, they would make a grave mistake. This is not to say that the utterances of the former President would fail to carry weight with thoughtful voters, but it would be poor strategy for the Republican high command to place too much emphasis upon them. The popular mind is not analytical, and it might instantly associate the offering with the disappointment of a man defeated by the head of the Administration he criticizes, and, perhaps, looking for his own vindication at the polls in 1936. We are assuming, of course, that the utterances of Mr. Hoover would be condemnatory of much that is embodied in the New Deal, and, therefore, would replenish the rather scanty campaign material which so far has been assembled against Mr. Roosevelt.

We doubt, however, if Mr. Hoover designs to enter the literature of current politics or even that he contemplates a renomination by the Republican party two years from now. However that may be, no man in the United States is so well equipped for the task of informed criticism as he. Whatever may be thought of his Administration, to what degree it may be praised or maligned, he was that Administration, and no one else has so comprehensive a knowledge of the episodes occurring during his regime, no one else the inner knowledge of his plans and purposes. Idle for the first time in his life, Mr. Hoover for a year and a half has done nothing but study public movements. There is no good reason for doubting the unselfish disinterestedness with which, as President, he administered the affairs of the country, in so far as he was permitted to do so by his political enemies, and no one now should question his capacity to write without undue prejudice.

While President he was roundly criticized for refusing to turn on his critics and blast them, and the same spirit of Quaker restraint should govern in his forthcoming work.

The Post Impressionist

"A Place to Live."

Postoffice, Tuesday.

LET'S go to China. Let's go to Hopei Province in China.

Let's go to Tinghsien in Hopei Province.

Why?

Because "an average farming family of six persons" can live there, and not badly, on $187 and no cents a year.

* * *

If you don't believe it, ask Dr. T'ang Leang-Li. You will find him just around the corner in Shanghai—299 Szechuen road, a little way down the street, but on the other side from the Oriental Ice-Cream Parlor. He is the man who told us, and he is well and favorably known in the circles in which he moves—although, in another sense, he doesn't move in circles; he runs straight ahead with the very informative "Chinese Information Service."

* * *

Dr. T'ang prefaces his figures with the statement that they are "interesting." We call this too modest an opinion. We suspect Dr. T'ang of sitting out there in the cool of Szechuen road, cocking his mind's eye across the Pacific (which lies east of the ice-cream parlor) to our unpacific Occident, and smiling in his flowing Oriental sleeve—if anybody in the Orient still wears Oriental sleeves.

Interesting? Are we interested? Envy is something more than interest, Dr. T'ang!

* * *

Well, anyway, the doctor—who, quite seriously, writes his bulletins in excellent style and gets them out in most attractive form—assures us that the following are "really accurate and genuine figures" concerning happy Hopei living-costs per year per certain real persons:

Food	$129.46	69.23%
Fuel	15.07	8.06"
Rent	14.24	7.64"
Clothing	11.44	6.12"
Miscellaneous	16.79	8.95"
	$187.00	100.00

* * *

Clothes, eleven forty-four. We can see that the tourist-trade is going to buck up in Hopei. There are lots of small-minded American men that will divert thither wives that have set their hearts for a dash to Paris.

And there are a few items in this list not unattractive for the not-at-all mean male who is thinking of retiring . . .

* * *

But let's take another look at the doctor's report.

* * *

We were suspicious for a moment of that last item.

We wondered on what those riotous Tinghsienites were throwing away all that money which they grouped under the agreeably general heading of "Miscellaneous." You see, we ourselves have, in our time, been the authors of expense-accounts.

We are bound to admit that the doctor does his hurried best to reassure us. Says he:

"The last item of $16.79 includes taxes, expenditures on recreation, education, religion, etc."

* * *

* * *

* * *

And education. Not even our educationally reactionary friend, the Major—notoriously opposed to anything above the Little Red Schoolhouse—would greatly object to a fraction of the $16.79 per annum going for schools, though he'd want to know which fraction it was.

* * *

For our own part, to be sure, we feel that as much might well be spent on religion as on food—provided, of course, that it was the right kind of religion.

* * *

* * *

Well, if we now have a hunch that the recreation item of this budget is a trifle thin, it isn't because we believe that the Tinghsienites are a dour people. It really is that we have another hunch that they aren't.

In short, we'd like to know what debauchery is concealing its shining head under that too apparently careless "etc."

* * *

"Sixty-two per cent of the residents of Tinghsien between the ages of fourteen and twenty-five," says Dr. T'ang, "are unable to read or write their own names, much less peruse the newspapers. Yet, this figure is probably slightly more favorable than in other districts, as Tinghsien has been the scene during the past six years of extensive mass-education work. In the sixty-one villages where this movement has been going on, the percentage of illiterates has dropped to 34 per cent. In both cases the percentage of female illiterates is far higher than that of the men. In the figures covering the whole Hsien district, men are 37 per cent illiterate, while 91 per cent of the women are unable to read."

* * *

Exactly. That explains the education-fraction of "Miscellaneous." But it leaves "etc." lurking under its serene smoke-screen.

* * *

Nevertheless, the total is attractive. If you aren't a meat-eater. They have less meat than anything else out there. "More than two-thirds of the budget is spent on food." Fine. "For four or five months of the year, these people have nothing at either of their two daily meals except sweet-potatoes." Not so fine. "But the rest of the year they feast on millet, beans, kaliang, buckwheat, cereals and melons."

Hope again rises!

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Words, My Lord

THEO. HALL

ALL of us, when we were very young, knew the big brown dictionary on the stand in the corner of the library. It was just about the biggest book in the world, we thought in awe. Why, it had a million pages and weighed a ton!

On red-letter days, my sister and I would be allowed to play with it. Someone would put it on the floor for us, and we'd crouch over it side by side—whatever was pictured on a left-hand page was hers to enjoy and crow over, my treasures turned up on the right. If she got the statue of Diana, of Ephesus, I made the most of a diaphragm gauge. If a curiously stupid fate gave her a pocket knife, I had to content myself with a podura, a small leaping insect like a flea—on the next page there'd pop up poison ivy, and I knew it just wasn't my day.

All that was very long ago. And yet the same awe overcomes me, and I feel like breaking out into circus adjectives, magnificent, stupendous, colossal, and so on, when I open the fresh-minted successor of that big brown book—"Webster's New International Dictionary; Second Edition." America should be solidly proud, this summer, of its greatest publishing work of a quarter-century, for the one standard American dictionary has been made over from cover to cover, from the first colored picture of the President's flag to the last line on Ulrich Zwingli, sixteenth century Swiss patriot. To a whole new era, of 8-year-olds playing on the rug or graybeards looking up a cubical hyperbolic parabola, the "Second Edition" comes as the one indispensable treasure house of knowledge.

• • • •

Webster means words. Old Noah's "American Spelling Book," 1783, was still selling by the million a hundred years later. The early profits allowed him to spend 20 years in writing, single-handed, our first authoritative dictionary—issued in 1828. Perhaps you'd like to see how the chief editions have grown.

	Year.	Words.
"American Dictionary of the English Language"	1828	70,000
"Unabridged"	1864	114,000
"International"	1890	175,000
"New International"	1909	400,000
"New International: Second Edition"	1934	550,000

Since 1843, when Webster died, one firm has continued to publish the series—G. & C. Merriam, of Springfield, Mass. That's all they do, but it would seem enough.

• • • •

For, for $20 (with other editions in leather binding and India paper up to $35), you get so much that the barest outline would fill out the rest of the column. But let me put it in statistics.

550,000 words with data, far more than in any other dictionary on earth.

122,000 words which don't even appear in any other general dictionary.

5,000 abbreviations explained.

To bring the 1909 edition down to date, to rewrite completely two-thirds of that material and add I don't know how much more, Merriam worked for ten years, spent $1,300,000, and employed 207 scholastic and practical experts such as Dean Pound, of Harvard, for law, and George Pierce Baker, of Yale, for drama.

The result is a dictionary-encyclopedia which lists all the grasses on earth and tells you how a linotype works, which shows you what 150 named colors look like ("algerian" and "capucine," for example) and describes the legislature of Yugoslavia, which gives you the signs used in aeronautics or stamp-collecting and clears up your doubts on sclerokeratoiritis.

In a word, it's got everything.

• • • •

Infinity is a term not to be lightly used. But all I can think of in connection with this astounding work is the infinity of pains which went into it.

Take the good, simple word, "bread." Spelling and pronunciation are easy. But then we go to the word's roots in Anglo-Saxon, Old Frisian, Dutch, German, Old Norse, Swedish, Danish, Greek and Latin. The what and why of bread takes 11 lines. Salt-rising and light bread take 6 more. Then come 27 compounds using the word. And then we reach but to the second meaning, there being 4 in all. Well, one little slip, a letter or comma, well-meant, but out of place—! But it's crystal-correct. Somebody, you see, took sufficient pains. There are 599,999 other items, and I've a headache.

The "Second Edition of Webster's International" is the kind of a book which comes once in a blue moon—a kind so plainly and undeniably valuable that it doesn't need reviewing. All I can say is—there it stands.

Or I might add an answer to people who ask me if I really read the books I review. But I suppose today I don't need to.

Europe's Peace Rests On Defensive Pacts

Seven-Power Treaty Approved by All Nations Except Germany and Poland, Both of Which Have Price for Their Signatures.

(Note—War clouds over large areas of the world, concentrating in Europe and the Pacific areas, have added to rising unrest, approaching the tension which caused conflict in 1914. Frederick Kuh, United Press correspondent in London, has made a survey of current political trends showing the alignments of the powers and who is whose friend in the new setup abroad. Following is the first of a series of five dispatches telling of his findings, which also bear on the United States and her relations today.)

By Frederick Kuh.
(United Press Staff Correspondent).
(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—An interlocking system of pacts and defensive military alliances will bind Europe over to peace if hopes of leading statesmen come true.

The latest and most elaborate of the pact schemes to be submitted is that which France, in accord with Russia, presented for British approval, which was promptly obtained along with Italy's. This plan envisages a seven-power pact, including Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia and the Soviet Union. Each of these signatories would guarantee not only to respect but to defend the frontiers of every other signatory against aggression by any party to the accord or by an outside power. In addition, France, though not belonging to the pact powers, would act as guarantor.

The most important features of the project would be a French guarantee of Russia's western border, a Russian guarantee of France's eastern frontier and renewed German and Russian promises to safegard the boundaries of Poland.

Germany and Poland Are Only Holdouts.

EVERY European government concerned, and some which are not directly implicated, have expressed approval of the scheme, except Germany and Poland.

Germany is bold toward the plan. She detects in it a plot to encircle her. Moreover, she is well aware that it would mean giving her voluntary sanction to the frontiers drawn by the Versailles treaty—a sanction extracted from her in 1919 under duress at the peace conference.

Yet it is felt abroad that a German regime of undisputed nationalism, such as Adolf Hitler's, could venture to make this sacrifice more easily than a less chauvinistic government, because the present German rulers are deemed less liable to the charge of "selling out to the enemy."

At any rate, Germany will agree to join the pact only if France consents to legalize German rearmament and concede military, naval and air equality to Berlin.

Poland Has Price For Signature.

POLAND, too, has a price for dropping her present objections to the pact. She insists that her military ally, Roumania, should be added to the pact family as the eighth member and that the present Polish-Lithuanian border be guaranteed by all signatories. The latter condition means that Poland demands legal recognition of her annexation of the Vilna (Lithuania) district.

Should the seven power pact project be sidetracked or wrecked, there is excellent reason to believe that a three-power defensive military alliance will be concluded between France, Russia and Czechoslovakia—and this, indeed, might denote the encirclement of Germany.

This Eastern Locarno, as it is now being called, would be linked with other important European treaty blocs. Firstly, it would be tied to the Western Locarno, consummated in 1925 between Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Belgium, guaranteeing the German frontier with France and Belgium. If the newly proposed pact materializes, Russia's pledge to defend France's frontier with Germany would automatically link the Eastern and Western Locarnos.

But the East-European accord would also be interwoven with the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Rumania) inasmuch as one of the Little Entente's important members, Czechoslovakia, would be a vital link in the new Eastern Locarno chain.

If present plans are realized, then, a network of interlocking pacts will span the European continent, tending, as far as any "scrap of paper" can be relied upon, to consolidate peace and render very great the risk which any aggressor would incur in inciting a conflict or trespassing upon another country's soil.

Va. Hearing Set On Milk Control

Norfolk - Portsmouth Area Is Affected.

Richmond, Aug. 6 (AP).—The State milk commission today set August 16 as the date for a hearing on the advisability of extending its authority to the Norfolk-Portsmouth area.

The commission urged that representatives of producers, distributors and consumers attend.

The area has been in a somewhat upset state recently through a price war on bottled milk. At the hearing the commission will hear evidence and opinion concerning the conduct of the dairy business and will decide if it should undertake control of the market. Should dairymen handling a major portion of the milk produced and marketed in the area declare themselves in favor of the control, the commission will investigate and formulate a set of rules.

Success Claimed In Mosquito War

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Mosquito eradication work in Maryland last winter has resulted in a marked decrease in the number of the insect pests in the State, it was announced today by Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State Entomologist in charge of the work.

The results of the campaign, Dr. Cory said, are such that the expenditure of $99,000 by the Federal Government was entirely justified.

He reported that there has been a considerable reduction of annoyance by mosquitoes at Chesapeake Beach, in Calvert County, and much improvement in conditions at Westminster, Carroll County. Several points on the Eastern Shore, especially Ocean City, Cambridge, Oxford, Royal Oak, St. Michaels and Tilghman's Island, are almost free of the pests, Dr. Cory said. About 2,000 men are given work during the campaign.

Virginia Soldiers Open Gun Practice

Virginia Beach, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—Under canvas for their annual two-week training course, the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, Virginia National Guard, began rifle and pistol practice on the State Rifle Range here today.

Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, commanding, is in charge.

Musketry instruction by Regular Army officers is being stressed in this year's training. A battalion at a time is firing the Army course at the range. From high scorers the State's National Guard rifle team will be selected.

Colored CCC Camp Protest Is Ignored

Men Arrive Wednesday at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Despite reported promises to city officials to defer action on proposed establishment of a colored CCC camp here, a detachment of 190 colored men will arrive here Wednesday to occupy the present Chancellorsville camp, James G. Harrison, Richmond, Fredericksburg & Petersburg Railroad passenger agent, said today.

Present Chancellorsville camp members will be transferred to Elkton, Tazewell and Marion, Va. A scheduled conference between T. C. Walker, head of CCC activities in this area, and citizens and officials of Fredericksburg was ordered postponed by Walker, who notified authorities he would be unable to be present.

Protests against installation of the colored camp here were filed Friday by Mayor J. R. Payne, City Manager L. J. Houston, the Chamber of Commerce and several citizens with CCC officials in Washington.

8th District G.O.P. Supports Green

Platform Adopted by 300 in Culpeper Meeting.

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Earnest enthusiasm marked the convention of Eighth District Republicans held in Culpeper today, with more than 300 giving support to the nomination of L. John Locke Green, of Arlington, formerly of Culpeper, as candidate for the House of Representatives, to oppose Judge Howard W. Smith in the November election.

Otis R. Thornhill, Culpeper, county Republican chairman, presided at the meeting, which opened in Municipal Hall at 11 a. m. and continued through the day.

Welcome to the town was given by Atwell Somerville, mayor-elect of Culpeper. The platform containing G. O. P. principles, was adopted as drafted by a committee of Cecil Coppage, Madison; L. C. McPherson, Arlington; Ernest Duff, Charlottesville, and John Grayson, of Fauquier County.

Baltimore Is Host To Meat Dealers

Baltimore, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Meat dealers from all parts of the Nation gathered in Baltimore today for the forty-ninth annual convention of the National Retail Meat Dealers Association. About 3,000 are attending.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who had been slated to speak today, was unable to attend because of an engagement in the Middle West.

Figures presented before the convention by William Whitfield Woods, president of the Institution of American Meat Packers, showed that if the present ratio of meat consumption continues in the United States during 1934, every individual in the Nation will have eaten his own weight in meat. Beef is the favorite meat of Americans, Mr. Woods said, the per capita consumption being about 75 pounds per year.

A Bright Future.

President Roosevelt has been shown by a radio poll to lead all political radio speakers. If by any chance he shouldn't be reelected he can get a much less trying job indorsing tooth pastes, shaving creams or something.

• • • •

Gen. Johnson is the second best radio speaker, the vote shows, with Senator Borah third. Wait till Borah hears about this!

• • • •

Obviously.

Robbers hijacked a truckload of tooth paste in Connecticut the other day. You would call these culprits "two gum" men, of course.

• • • •

And if a tooth-paste hijacker gets into a skirmish with the authorities it obviously becomes a brush with the police.

• • • •

Bad Enough!

Most every day I hear complaints
About the human race;
Some do not like its manners,
Others dislike its face;
Some claim that every one is dumb,
Just simply asinine!
While there are plenty who abhor
The human form divine.

Now I can scarce believe that folks
Are quite as bad as painted,
But maybe that's because I'm not
So very well acquainted.
I know that some are not much good,
And many lack acumen,
But the worst trait I have noticed is

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Plays of Tolstoi.

Toward the close of the nineteenth century the leading writers in all European countries turned their attention and their talents to the theater. This was partly owing to the vast influence of Ibsen. I have often wondered what would have happened to modern literature had Ibsen in 1850 devoted himself to the novel rather than to the drama.

In the nineties the Scandinavians, Ibsen, Bjornson, Strindberg, were dramatists; so were the Frenchman, Rostand; the Belgian, Maeterlinck; the German, Hauptmann; the Italian, D'Annunzio; the Spaniards, Echegeray and Benavente; the British and Irish, Shaw, Synge, Barrie, Galsworthy, while the Russian novelists, Tolstoi, Chekhov, Gorki, wrote successful plays.

In addition to less important pieces, Tolstoi wrote six plays of varying stage value, but all of high significance. Of these six, four should be read (and seen if possible) by those who are attracted by the towering genius of their author, as expressed in "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina." His tragedy, "The Power of Darkness," was acted on many Continental stages before it appeared anywhere in English. Its plot and dialogue are naturalistic and the details are horrible; but its motive was evangelical and it will never be lost to the stage. With a pen in his hand Tolstoi could not help being truthful.

"The Fruits of Enlightenment" is a delightful, even merry, comedy, full of fun and satire. So far as I know, the first performance ever given in America was by the undergraduates of Yale; I can see Mr. Johnfritz Achelis now, who acted almost with the ease of a professional. This play resembles in intention Browning's long doggerel poem, "Mr. Sludge the Medium." It is a satire on spiritualistic seances and the fashionable women who take up spirit-rapping as a fad.

"The Living Corpse" was not produced until after the death of its author. I first saw it in German at Munich. It was produced in America with the leading part taken by John Barrymore. I do not think it is a very effective play. It is said (I wish I had been present that night) that when in the scene before the examining magistrate, where the accused turns on the accuser, many people in the audience were coughing; and John Barrymore, without changing his tone, introduced the following question: "What do you know of the real condition of the people? How can you tell what people are like? How can you tell anything with all these sea-lions in the audience?"

Of the plays by Tolstoi the least valuable for the stage and the most valuable as autobiography is "The Light Shines in the Darkness." If anyone wishes to know why the great Russian finally left his home, this play will tell him. It shows the insuperable obstacles in any organized society to living as he thought a perfect Christian should live. It is a confession. The Russians believe more in theory and love consistency than men of any other nation, and of all Russians, past, present and future, there was none to whom practical inconsistency was more tragic than to Tolstoi.

Nobody Has Learned to Drive Hearse From Back Seat

By Robert Quillen.

A certain man who had worked hard and accumulated a great fortune decided to place his house in order and sent for his lawyer.

"I wish to make a will," said he, "dividing my property equally among my children. But I also wish to provide safeguards and impose restrictions that will require them to live decent and orderly lives. They don't get a cent if they don't behave."

"I see," said the lawyer. "You wish to leave a blueprint, telling them how to live, and they must follow instructions or lose their inheritance."

"That's the idea," said the rich man.

"Well," said the lawyer, "have you managed your own life so wisely that you have no regrets?"

"No," the rich man admitted, "I have made an unhappy mess of it."

"And yet you feel competent to manage the lives of your children. That is strange. Do they obey you in all matters and accept your advice without resentment?"

"They do not," said the rich man. "These spoiled modern youngsters ——"

"I understand," interrupted the lawyer. "You can't control them while you are alive, yet you expect to do it after you are dead. I envy your faith. But no doubt your management of their lives up to this time, despite their occasional rebellions, has been uniformly successful."

Oil Act Sets Up "Dictatorship," Firm Charges

(Associated Press.)

A legal challenge to the law establishing NRA and the Oil Administration placed before the Supreme Court yesterday asserted the act made the President "A Supreme Dictator" by giving him Legislative powers.

The suit, the third to reach the court assailing the section of the National industrial recovery act relating to oil regulation, was filed by the Amazon Petroleum Corporation and a large number of producers in the east Texas fields.

It seeks to prevent enforcement of regulations issued by Secretary Ickes under the oil code.

Oil Section Alone Affected.

Attorneys said, however, that should the hightest tribunal uphold the contention of the Amazon Corporation it would affect only the petroleum section of the recovery act and would have no direct bearing on the provisions which authorized NRA itself.

The company said that while the Government claimed to be regulating interstate commerce in its rules affecting oil production, in reality it was attempting to curtail the flow of petroleum to force prices higher.

Attacking the statute under which Secretary Ickes is acting as oil administrator by the President's direction, the companies said Federal agents had trespassed on their property, threatening civil action and criminal prosecution unless they complied with regulations laid down.

Suit Passed On Twice.

The suit filed yesterday has been passed upon twice by Federal courts.

A district court in Texas enjoined Federal officials from enforcing the petroleum code regulations but the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that ruling and upheld the recovery act as it had already done in another pending case.

The appeal was taken from that decision.

Bar Harbor Society Has Active Week

Many Capital Families Take Part in Round of Entertainments.

Members of Bar Harbor society, which includes many families from Washington who spend their summer there, have just brought to a close the gayest week of the season. The annual international maritime tennis tournament finals were played Saturday afternoon and that evening many large dinners were given before the ball, which was held at the attractive Bar Harbor Club.

The ball was given in honor of the officers of the British battleships, H. M. S. Scarborough, H. M. S. Dragon, H. M. C. S. Saguenay, and H. M. C. S. Champlain, which have been anchored in the harbor during the week, and the officers of the two United States warships U. S. S. Indianapolis and the U. S. S. Louisville, which were delayed and did not arrive until Saturday afternoon.

Club Gayly Decorated.

The club was gayly decorated with flags. The girls, dressed in their most charming summer frocks, were danced "off their feet" by handsome naval escorts in full dress uniform, while many walked on the long veranda overlooking the water, where they could see the ships riding at anchor in the distance.

All during the week there were many teas, dinners and small dances and among those who entertained in honor of the officers of the fleet were Representative and Mrs. Corning Parker, who own a beautiful home there which is completely furnished in early American style; and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, who also have a charming home there.

Others Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart entertained at a large party in their home, Italian Villa, as did Capt. and Mrs. John R. Edie, of Washington. Mr. Eugene Stein, who was the Russian Minister to the Argentine during the last years of the imperial regime and the period of the provisional government, entertained on Monday evening in honor of officers.

The English and Canadian ships will hoist anchor and sail from there today. The United States ships will sail on August 13 for other ports along the coast, but until they leave the round of entertainments will continue.

International Art Group Makes Trip

Paintings at Baltimore Museum Viewed.

Members and friends of the International Art Forum who visited the Baltimore Museum of Art last Sunday included Mme. Rose Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harradon, Miss Clelia Fioravanti, Mr. and Mrs. Arnaldo Berenguer, Miss Katherine Cooksey, Mr. C. K. Ludwig, Mrs. Gertrude Hite, Miss Marjorie Hite, Miss Muriel Hite, Miss Myrtle Patterson, Mrs. William Swift, Miss Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Reuter and Mr. Milton Smith.

Much interest was shown in the group of paintings by Matisse, the great number of which clearly illustrate the evolution of his art. This group holds great interest for students of art and psychology and is especially interesting when contrasted with works by Valadon, Vlaminck, and others also on view.

The successful undertaking of this trip has resulted in plans for another group to be organized in September.

A new play, never before produced, and by a prominent Washington man, "Welcome to His Excellency" belongs particularly to the Capital City. The setting in the United States Legation in Serbania, which might be any European country, and the leading characters are a newly appointed minister, a political appointee; two very proper "career" secretaries, a self-willed young daughter of the minister and a romantic but knowing Serbanian prince. The contrast between the minister and the secretaries is strongly marked.

Hidden Castle Is Found for Adventurers

Those Who Enter Will Find Good Food at Modest Cost.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN Alice of Wonderland saw the little white rabbit pull a watch from its waistcoat pocket she couldn't have felt half the surprise that a Washingtonian will when she turns off the lighted highway and drives past a moat and up the hill to an honest-to-goodness castle hidden away in the trees.

At that, her adventures are just beginning. Once inside a dimly-lighted hallway, she'll notice an orchestra at one end, and on either side large rooms filled with tables and chairs. On the walls hang old family portraits, and in between these are book shelves filled with richly bound volumes.

She will seat herself at one of the tables by a wide open window and enjoy the never failing breeze that rustles through the trees outside, while a prompt waiter brings her one of the finest chicken dinners in this vicinity. Along with golden brown, crisply fried half of chicken she will have biscuits so light and fluffy that she'll wonder who in the world makes biscuits like these. If she inquires, she will find that it is Daniel. Who else could it be?

Between courses she will be bound to marvel to herself how such a spot came ever to be built and what its story is. If she's fortunate she will find someone who will tell her the history, and then all in one she will have had music, the most delightful of dinners, romantic atmosphere and the feeling of calm and satisfaction that comes with beautiful surroundings. When she leaves she will ask for the bill and find it hard to believe that all this costs her but $1.

Perhaps she would like to come again, and if so she will find that the club is open from noon until 1:30 a. m.

If by any chance she'd like to have a Dutch supper there some evening, there's the tap room at her disposal. Or if she wishes to entertain more formally she may make reservations for a private dining room.

Perhaps she'd prefer tea on the terrace or on the lawn in the heavy shade of the tall trees that hide the castle from the road.

Smart and Useful Scarfs.

Truly "smart words in scarf language" are the sheer silk print triangles for topping off a light silk summer frock, or adding a spicy touch to a pique coat.

There's no fear that these scarfs can't be used. They fit at least a dozen needs. As collars they're smart and sporty. And certainly on coolish evenings they feel very comfortable tucked around the neck.

They come in such a variety of colors that they will go with almost anything and be particularly striking with a solid white outfit.

Compact-Lipstick Case.

Here's something you're likely to buy for a gift—and keep for yourself. It's a plain little leather case in either black or brown, that holds a compact and a lipstick.

In the brown cases the compact and lipstick are both of gold metal. In the black one they're black trimmed with silver.

The sportswoman can appreciate immediately what a boon it would be to carry both these essentials in a small case which she can tuck away in her sweater pocket. The shopper can tell at a glance what a convenience it will prove to her. When she takes a hurried five minutes to retouch her face she may reach in her bag, find the leather case at once, and not have to grope around in a conglomeration of bills, keys, cigarettes and all the other paraphernalia that clutters a woman's purse.

Surprise Package.

There's mystery about a simple cardboard box scarcely a foot square in size. Inscriptions on the outside insinuate all kinds of things about the contents but tell nothing. But there's a guarantee that whatever they are they will keep a group of from ten to fifteen people amused for hours.

The guarantee further says there are no rough activities included, no tricks and sources of embarrassment—but plenty of surprises.

There's a confidential tip from one who has peeped inside to the effect that this one box contains goodness knows how many others, and each of the others is just as entertaining as the one before it!

As proof that a little mystery isn't amiss for the young ones too, there's another equally mysterious package for a child's party.

"Different" Shakers.

The newest arrivals at a local shop are some salt and pepper shakers. Now, don't lose interest. These are different! They're made of white china and decorated with black colonial silhouettes and a gold painted top. You may rest assured they will show off to advantage on your colonial drop-leaf table.

There are still others that might have been designed especially for blue willow table china. These are white china, too, but they are painted with little blue ships. Only 60 cents a pair.

Cold Cuts and Fixings Fine for Out of Doors

By Ann Barrett.

FOR THE KIND of informal summer dinners that are like as not to be served on the front porch or in the back yard (wherever there's a breeze) there's nothing more fetching than a platter of assorted cold cuts with all the fixings.

For Gracie Allen, fixings would be plenty of pickles. For Marlene Dietrich, a particular kind of tart-tasting potato salad. For explorer Herbert Spencer Dickey, some good cheese. For sports-commentator Grantland Rice, hot biscuits.

None of these things are hard to have. Not even the cold cuts themselves, now that you can buy them all at the grocer's—from good baked ham to tasty whole chicken cooked in the can. But, I confess, I like to serve something or other on my platter of cold cuts that comes out of my own kitchen. And here's something that is something! A licking-good meat loaf that doesn't have to come out of the oven.

Top-of-the-Stove Meat Loaf.

It's cooked on top of the stove—after making like this: First cut the crust off four slices bread (white, rye or whole wheat). Crumble this up into a bowl containing one can of tomato soup (undiluted). Stir and let stand till bread and soup become rather a smooth mixture. Then add to one pound ground round steak, along with two tablespoons grated onion, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt and one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Mix thoroughly. (This will make a pretty soft mixture to handle, but that's just what will make it exceptionally juicy when finished.) Next, sprinkle a thick layer of fine cracker crumbs on your table or board.

Take up parts of the mixture in good-sized pieces and shape these in the cracker crumbs so as to make flat cakes about 3½ by 2½ by 1¼ inches. Brown these in butter (in a heavy skillet), then cook them slowly (uncovered) till done (about 10 minutes). If you can resist eating them hot (they're delicious that way) put them away to cool. Then when you're ready to serve, just slice them the broad way of each cake. You'll get four or five slices to each cake (according to your skill and the quality of your slicing knife).

Summer Potato Salad.

A good potato salad (not too rich for summer) of tart-tasting sort Marlene Dietrich likes, goes this way: Over 1 quart of hot sliced potatoes pour a salad dressing made as follows: ½ cup vinegar, 10 tablespoons salad oil, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons grated onion, 2 tablespoons finely-cut parsley.

Let the salad chill at least one hour, stirring it carefully once in a while so as to mix it well with dressing, without breaking up the potato. Serve on crisp lettuce. (This salad really needs no further dressing. But if you like you may top it with mayonnaise when you serve it.)

Spiced Jelly.

A spiced orange and wine jelly would give just the right final touch to that meal, I think. Tricky, and light. And quickly made in the cool of the morning.

Here it is: First squeeze enough orange juice to fill 1 cup and heat this. Put 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin to soak in ½ cup cold water for a few minutes. Then dissolve this in the hot orange juice. Add ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ cup sherry wine, 1-16 teaspoon each of cinnamon and clove. Pour into molds rinsed out of cold water (this will make 4) and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Junket and Peaches.

Another good dessert (easier still) for this kind of meal is one of the junket family (powder or tablet) in a plain flavor such as vanilla, topped with well-sweetened sliced peaches. Make the pudding according to the directions on the container. Turn it into glass sherbets or any glass individual serving dish. But fill these only two-thirds full. Chill the pudding icy-cold. When ready to serve, fill up the dishes with the sweetened peaches.

The deep yellow of the peaches against the snow-white pudding will gladden the eye even before the tongue gets the good news.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Constipation Habit.

Constipation is one of the commonest symptoms with which the physician has to deal. A large percentage of those who are below par and who are asked to describe their symptoms will list constipation as one of their chief complaints.

Many are inclined to magnify the failure of the lower bowel to empty itself at least once in 24 hours. Laxatives are so widely heralded and so much has been said about keeping the bowel free that entirely too high a percentage of our population has come to depend on them. They give temporary relief but may destroy a normal function of the body.

Go to the toilet each day 15 to 30 minutes after breakfast whether there is a desire to do so or not. Remain there for at least 15 minutes unless a thoroughly satisfactory result is earlier obtained. Use only moderate pressure on the abdominal wall. This may be assisted by placing the feet upon a low stool, thus bringing the thighs against the abdomen. If there is no result do not attempt to secure a stool by laxatives or enemas. Repeat the procedure at the same time the day following and if necessary remain at stool longer. Continue until after the third day before resorting to a low enema.

During the habit forming period the individual should drink plenty of water between meals and should take 15 to 20 minutes of active setting-up exercises on arising in the morning.

In order that full dependence may be placed upon the normal functions of the bowel one must make certain that there are no obstructions preventing normal evacuation. Laxatives are, as a rule, cheap and easy to take and one feels a false sense of relief after their use. There are, of course, cases in which laxatives are needed and in which they are of great value.

Child Chats

Set of Sand Box Toys Certain to Delight Childish Hearts.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

HAVE YOU seen the new sand toys? They are made of wood, which gives them greater durability. There are no sharp, tin edges to cut childish hands.

A set includes a rake with widely spaced prongs that will make lovely grooves for rivulets in the sand, a sturdy hoe and shovel, a cup with a convenient handle to make wonderful cakes or pies, and an implement for other designs.

Prices range from $1.50 to $1.75—not cheap, but well worth while if there is a birthday in the family, or if Aunt Mary or Uncle John wants to give a present that will delight childish hearts.

(Thursday: The Timid Child.)

If you want advice on books or toys, write Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post, stating the age and sex of the child for whom the gift is intended.

Wallpaper Feels Influence of Art

Dark-Toned Coverings to Be Most Popular.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Wall paper is back in style again and has gone arty. Just any wall paper with chrysanthemums, butterflies or wild roses wriggling over it no longer will do. The fashionable wall covering design must bear the name of the artist whose brain child it is.

Samples of the new fall wall papers shown at the convention of manufacturers here indicate that the dark-toned wall coverings will be popular. Shades shown included chocolate brown, olive green, night-sky blue, wine red. Some of the simpler papers are sprinkled with tiny pin dot or very narrow stripes. Many plain colors were shown.

Famous designers and cartoonists had signed their names to some very striking designs. The wall paper designed by one famous artist will sell for $1 a roll, whereas the price of his canvases runs into four figures.

Ham Salad in Tomato Shells.

2 cups cold ham, chopped
1 cup celery
1 dozen stuffed olives, cut in halves.
½ cup French dressing

Remove the inside pulp and seeds from six tomatoes and fill with the meat salad. Mix, let stand ½ hour. Dress with mayonnaise. Serves six.

Color Change Gives Rented Bathroom Life

AT THIS season when so many persons are exchanging their household comforts for unaccustomed deficiencies in country housekeeping, the rented bathroom becomes a problem. There is often something so alien and forbidding about a rented bathroom that the timid find it a great feat to go in, shut the door and take a bath in terrible loneliness. The rented floor seems to bear the mementoes of generations of careless plumbers; the stark walls, always a musty white, have too few and too weak towel racks; the bathroom curtain is usually the lesser half of a broken-up pair.

Since few householders have the money, and none the desire, to make structural changes for a landlord, the trick is to make the bathroom habitable for the season.

Color is the answer and green is the color. A great deal of its bright freshness will take the curse off mustiness in a way no other color can. One woman, who takes a different place in the country almost every year, has what she calls her "green box." In it she keeps a complete equipment for cheering rented bathrooms. It comes out the minute she moves to the country and goes back to her storeroom when she returns to town.

Her suggestions are worth recording. To begin with, she says the green should be a good, strong stimulating green, not a delicate shade which will fade out quickly. For the floor she has two good-sized rugs of soft bathroom chenille, solid green with just a tiny white border. She has any number of big, fluffy white bath towels with bright green borders and all green washrags and bath mats for high lights of color.

For the windows she has organdie curtains with deep hems at the tops, which may be adjusted to fit the changing windows. Soap dishes, the existence of which is always a surprise to landlords, she takes with her, and also a bottle set of opaque green glass to match. If the landlord will let her she puts up additional hooks and towel rods. Green cleansing tissues and a big bottle of green bath salts complete a really pleasant picture.

West Writing Best Poetry, Editor Says

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—The West and the Midwest may be weak on crops, as a result of the drought, but they are strong on poets. That the best poetry is coming from these regions is the conclusion of Henry Goddard Leach, editor of the Forum, after examining contributions of about 3,000 collegiate poets who entered the Forum's recent poetry contest.

Mr. Leach believes the young poets of the Atlantic Seaboard are suffering from "New Era shock."

"They are striving for effect in phrase and rhythm," he said, "while neglecting the essential sincerity of their expressions. The Freudian School has laid a heavy hand on them and they are still mouthing pathological possibilities they don't quite understand.

"In the Midwest, however, the collegians have passed through their era of bitter struggle and have come out of it weather-beaten, a little hard, but thoroughly aware of what life is apt to hold for them. They are eager to adapt themselves to whatever social order is coming next. They have ceased to berate society and the system."

Curricula of Schools Scored as Misleading

School curricula "to a large extent interfere with individual development, and contribute much to dissatisfaction and irregularity, even sometimes leading to crime," according to Prof. John M. Brewer, of Harvard University, head of the Christian Science Mother Church.

Prof. Brewer believes guidance workers should be "constructive critics of the programs of studies." They should "contribute directly to curriculum itself and insist that other subjects which the child studies should also contribute to his guidance," Prof. Brewer says.

POTOMAC PARK

By CAROLYN COX

Wanda Mallory arrives in Washington penniless, and just as she is despairing of finding a job, she secures employment in one of the Government offices. Before she receives her first pay check, she receives a wire from Arkansas, asking her to come home because her mother has been hit by an automobile. She has just $1.17 in her pocketbook and can not go, so, trying to put her mind on what she is doing, she goes on with her work.

MOLLY MALONE passed at Wanda's desk and stooped to murmur in her ear: "We're going to give Miss Stokes a present of some kind before she retires. Want to contribute anything?"

Wanda murmured, "of course," and reached in the drawer for her pocketbook. "How much?"

"Whatever you want to give. Most of the girls are giving a quarter. It will make enough to get something nice."

Wanda dropped her quarter into the envelope and checked off her name. She did not begrudge the quarter, but she hoped that it would not be necessary to send a telegram to John. By this time her $1.17 had shrunk to the point that a telegram would have to be sent collect.

Wanda looked at Jennie Stokes with new interest. She saw a little old lady whose every gesture spoke of a compromise between Victorian gentility and Twentieth Century expediency. Her hair was like fresh-opened cotton, her cheeks were wrinkled, but pink; she was dainty, sweet, and conscientious.

Never would she have chosen an office, Wanda guessed, but having been shoved into it by the necessity of earning her bread, and having endured it for thirty years, she found herself at seventy as reluctant to go out of the office as she had been to come in. She smiled bravely, but there was pathos in her bravery. She had no relatives. For thirty years she had followed a schedule of rising, of coming to work, of going home, of retiring to sleep. Once she had had friends who liked tea and whist and delicate embroideries. They were gone. What would she do with so much leisure time?

War Department — Gentlemen: Please look up my record as a mechanic at Fort St. Philip at the mouth of the Mississippi River below New Orleans, La., during the Spanish-American War as I am getting old and in need of help from the Government."

Wanda turned the letter over curiously. It showed by its many indorsements that it had traveled through the various record divisions of the Washington headquarters, down to New Orleans, and back. The seventh indorsement carried the desired information.

"Hiram J. Higgins was employed in this district as laborer from April 12 to 31, 1898, at $1.70 per day."

All Greek to Wanda.

"I've simply got to buy myself a new coat before winter sets in. That old muskrat is worn to the skin in spots. I've had it for five years."

"She'll wear it another winter just the same," Molly Malone mumbled with more amusement than malice. "Just watch. You'd never guess from her clothes that she's a CAF-4, would you now?"

Wanda frowned in perplexity.

Wanda's frown deepened. A calf-fore was baffling, but a peetoo was incomprehensible.

"What's a calf-fore?"

"Eighteen hundred up."

(So many? Sounds like a ranch.) Aloud she said, "I don't know what you mean."

"Why, her grade—CAF—clerical, administrative and fiscal, you know. Eighteen hundred dollars a year, minimum. And he's a professional, grade 2. Minimum, $2,600. I'll show you how to look it up."

It Didn't Seem Polite.

"Please don't bother."

"No trouble at all. Here, take this card for keeps."

"Will I need it?"

"Sure, you will. It comes in handy."

"Why?"

"Because. When they try to run a bluff, or splurge beyond their means, you can check them up."

"What good will that do me?"

"It's nice to know."

"Perhaps."

"You couldn't ask them out and out what their salary is. That might sound odd. You bring it up in an offhand way, and say, I think she's in the same grade as you. CAF-5, I think it is."

"I'd feel funny saying that."

"Why, no. Everybody does it, and nobody seems to mind. At any rate, it's in the files."

"But it might be a girl from some other office."

System Was Handy.

"They all have files. And generally you have a friend who works at the same place to look it up for you—age and pay, particularly."

"I'd feel funny asking that."

"Why, no. We all do. Its the Government."

"Just the same——"

"It comes in handy. When the boys came back from France—I wasn't married then—the files were lots of help. If some of those Sammies only knew what we found out——"

"Oh, yes?"

"They'd go back and hunt a trench to hide in!"

"I'd feel foolish looking anybody up."

"Why? If they're square and on the level, there's no harm done; and if they're only bluffing, why, then you're entitled to the information. It's the Government."

Wanda laughed and inserted paper in her typewriter. Molly took the hint and remembered that she had work of her own to do.

No Use Splurging.

Wanda mused: The Government is just one big family. No secrets. No incentive to splurge when your income is common knowledge. Might as well live within your means, for nothing is gained by trying to create an impression of affluence when a casual acquaintance can ask you, What's your grade? with as much nonchalance as though the question were, What's the make of your car?

Jennie Stokes fluttered by, catching a sleeve on Wanda's wire desk tray. She paused with a pretty, stilted apology. Her eyes were feverishly bright, and the color was high in her soft criss-crossed cheek. She rearranged the papers in the tray. Her hands were shaking with suppressed excitement. She hurried on. Whatever had happened to her, she wanted to keep her own counsel.

A slow, dull boom was followed by another—and another. Wanda glanced at Leaping Lena, who was dashing toward the files. "Is that blasting?"

"No, It's the guns. They're burying some poor fellow at Arlington."

"Oh! Can we hear them?"

"When the wind is blowing this way, we can. It's just across the river, you know. Makes me feel awfully bad to hear them."

"What do they fire so many for? That's the fifth—and there's the sixth."

"That's to show the rank of the officer being buried. I don't know them all. Just twenty-one."

Salute Was Mystery.

Nine . . . ten . . . Leaping Lena had her card from the files. Wanda caught her on the home run. "What is twenty-one?"

"The President's salute. I never heard it, though."

"It sounds awfully close."

"There! Guess that was the last. How many?"

"Nineteen. Wonder what it means."

"Ask the messenger. Say, Curry! Do you know what nineteen guns are fired for?"

"Yes, ma'am. The Vice President."

"My land! He's not dead, is he?"

"No, ma'am, I reckon not. Less'n he died since morning."

"Well, for the land's sake!"

Curry went about his business; he gave information only on request.

A half-hour later the slow, tolling boom came again. As before, a reverent hush fell upon them as the solemn boom tolled the final rites of death. Slow, snorous detonations, reminding them of the transitoriness of life.

Wanda and Leaping Lena counted them.

"Seventeen, wasn't it? Did you make it 17?"

Seventeen This Time.

"Yes," said Wanda, "that's right."

"O, Curry! What's 17 guns for?"

"Seventeen? Why that's for the Secretary of War."

"My land! He's not dead, is he?"

"No, ma'am, I reckon not. Less'n he died since lunch. I took some papers over there for him to sign. He was looking fat and sassy then."

"Well, what in the world are they burying him for?" She hastened to amend her ambiguity as a shout of mirth went up from the office. "I mean—what are they shooting off guns for him in the cemetery for?"

"They weren't cemetery guns, Mrs. Vaughn. They were Fort Myer guns. A salute, I reckon. Maybe he went over to the circus in the riding hall."

"My land! I always did think that was Arlington."

"No, ma'am. Don't think you can hear Arlington. Not funerals. They just have a rifle squad to fire three shots across the grave. It isn't very loud."

Leaping Lena teetered on her heels, looking foolish. "For the land's sake! And many a time the tears have come to my eyes, hearing them. Think of shedding tears because the Vice President went to a riding circus! Don't it beat all?"

Jennie Seemed Upset.

She stopped abruptly, and adjusted her tortoise shell spectacles. She peered over the top of them.

"Why," she whispered, "what in the world has happened to Jennie? She seems all upset."

"Who wouldn't be?" Wanda retorted. "Leaving this month for good!"

"That's right. Poor, poor thing!" Wanda looked at Jennie Stokes sadly—so little, so patient, so pathetic, as she bent over her papers, trying to work.

What had Jennie Stokes known of life, of romance? Not much, probably. Possibly nothing. And yet she must have been a pretty girl.

Molly Malone, Doris Keene and Winnie Wilson had been appointed to select the good-will gift bought by office contributions. They wanted to buy something practicable, endurable, and easy to pack. After many conferences and visits to department stores, the committee found what they were looking for, and were holding it for the end of the month.

At last they had the present ready, nicely boxed. They were pleased with the committee's choice—a matched bed set for chilly nights, an electric heating pad, a dainty, crocheted jacket, and soft wool socks, all in delicate pink.

A nice, practical gift, Wanda agreed, but secretly she was depressed by it, for it intensified the image of herself in the years to come—old, homeless, shivering through the idle days. It was a wise selection, however; the blood runs thin and slow when one is old.

Jennie Stokes, contrary to rule, looked as if she had a fever.

Bad News Arrived.

Seven anxious days of waiting for Wanda, and then the letter came.

"I suppose John and Mary have told you all about poor mother," Ella wrote dutifully though hastily. "They promised they would. We were all there but you, and we couldn't help feeling hurt that you didn't come. Jim said maybe you couldn't, but I told him that you had nobody but yourself to look out for, and you could have managed if the rest of us could, with our big families and all. I just couldn't forgive myself if I hadn't shown that mark of respect for the one who has done more for us than anybody else in the world, and this being the last thing we'd ever be able to do for her."

"Oh!" gasped Wanda, and put her hand to her side quickly, as if stabbed. "She can't mean that—that——"

"She didn't regain consciousness after the accident. We were all thankful she didn't suffer. The funeral was Tuesday. We just got home this morning. I'll stop now. I'm tired out and the house is a wreck."

"Wanda's thoughts floated in a vast pool of nothingness, as though her brain were separated from her body and all sense communications were cut off.

Tuesday, she thought, when, after a long dazed period, thinking was resumed. Ella said Tuesday. Then mother didn't even get my letter in time. Although, if she didn't regain consciousness, it didn't matter.

She had overlooked Ella's postscript.

"Your letter to mother came while we were all there. John was going to send it back to you, but we thought it might have directions in it—you know—where to meet you at the train, or something. So Minnie read it aloud to us. It was a nice letter. We were all sorry that it was too late."

Wide Brims Favored on Hats For All-Day Wear in Early Fall

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—They're lower but they're higher. Impossible-sounding about anything. But nevertheless true about new fall hats. For their crowns are lower and they sit higher on the head. And that's the important thing to keep in mind when you shop for them, as you'll be doing very soon.

They aren't any shallower in the crown than the very shallow-crowned hats of summer. They couldn't be and still stay on the head. But there are more of those shallow crowns this fall. For now women have got used to their different look, finding it not only flat but flattering.

Pancake Berets.

The flattest hat of all is flat as a pancake and, in fact, is called a pancake—pancake beret.

The crown of it is so low it entirely disappears, leaving only a brim. Or is it the brim which disappears, leaving only a crown? You can see it in the top sketch and make up your own mind which it is that disappears.

Anyway it's the new version of the ever popular, ever fashionable beret. Larger than it used to be, and usually with a band in the back, as you see in the sketch, to hold it securely on the head. Because it sits up so high and so low.

It's made of antelope, gros-grain ribbon or fabric. It's a comfortable, light-on-the-head hat which is a fine choice for a first hat for general fall wear. It goes with all street, tailored and sports clothes.

Wide Brims.

Another of the good general all-day hats you might like to put on right now is sketched, too. This is just one type of the many brimmed hats of felt which you'll see around this fall.

The wideness of its brim (hats of this type have brims from 2½ to 3 inches wide) is particularly good for this early season wear when the sun is still hot and dazzling.

Notice that this brim is straight and sharp and that the hat is worn straight on the head.

Other types of brims are softer than this, drooping slightly. Or they may droop on one side and turn upon the other. Or turn up in the back and down in the front. And this last kind is one you'll see more of later on when coats take on their fur collars and hat backs have to step out of the way.

(Copyright, 1934, Amos Parrish.)

Hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better hat shops and department stores.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

If you expect to have a successful day, it may prove advisable to strictly adhere to one of the basic principles which govern most all successful business people, in dealings with others, and that is honesty. Sharp practice is soon detected, so the wise will avoid attempting it. Business, as a whole, may move sluggishly, and it might require a great deal of energy on your part, to hasten pending deals to a satisfactory conclusion. There is an excellent possibility of your receiving some money or its equivalent. A friend may surprise you by an unexpected gracious act, which should gratify you greatly. Social activities may throw you into contact with a person, or persons, who you are inclined to dislike. It is advisable for you to conceal your aversion, and be as gracious as possible, so as to avoid embarrassing your host. Sentimental couples should exercise a great deal of discretion if in public places this evening, as unfriendly criticism may be evoked if they spoon openly.

If a woman and August 7 is your natal day, it might be well to remember money is a scarce commodity at the present time, so appreciate the motive that prompts the giver of a gift, instead of feeling its giver has practiced penuriousness. The great amount of hard work you have done and the disappointments you have suffered may prove only preparatory labor essential to prepare you for success in a big way. The indomitable spirit you have will undoubtedly sustain you until your financial reward is commensurate with your efforts. Love may play a very important part in your life, and with you marriage should prove everything you desire it to be. Interior decorating, millinery, designing, painting or other work requiring a dexterous hand and an artistic eye offer you opportunities.

The child born on August 7 should develop into being everything a fond parent could hope for, so children born on this date have great expectations.

If a man and August 7 is your birth anniversary, your stability of character and ambition, which will spur you on, usually results in a successful career and financial independence. A woman's love should prove a great comfort to you.

Vendors "On the Line" in Seventh Street Market Have Little World All of Their Own

Yesterday, in Their Minds, May Mean Fifty Years Ago

Some First Saw the Fruit and Vegetable Stalls When Babies; Now Are Wistful of the Past.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

THE DAYS slip gently into years for the country men and women who sell their wares "on the line" at the market at Seventh and O streets.

For their years are full, made up of days spent close to the strong earth, crowded with hundreds of loved duties, warmed by lasting friendships.

And so the days glide by, and 50 years have vanished as an hour, and the woman who but a moment before was a young girl is a wise old woman, with grandchildren listening to her counsel.

"Why only yesterday," these women say, their eyes shining with memories, their thoughts retracing the years, "it seems only yesterday —but yes, it is 50 years." And their eyes look past the crowds of early morning marketers who exchange hearty greetings with the women behind the stalls, or haggle over their purchases; past the golden fruits, the fresh green vegetables piled high in the stalls, the great boxes of cantaloupes, like gleaming silver moons lighted one upon another, past the black mustached Italian who cries his wares like a barker in a circus.

The First Vendor.

"Just see them today, aren't they beautiful today?" cries the fruit vendor. His voice is loud and vibrant. His words sound above the chatter of the marketers who smile and pass on, or smile and pause and buy. "Please, lady, buy. Just see how beautiful they are today."

"Yes, 50 years I have been here, dead lady," says the shriveled little German woman, who has laboriously written her name, "Tina," on a scrap of brown paper. The name is in German script, for she has never learned to write English. Age has not taken the girlish flush from her cheeks, has not made life less exciting than when she first came to this strange land.

"I come here just after I landed from the old country. Then I was young, and there were babies, twelve of them. Now I have fifteen great grandchildren; I have 80 years, and I have a broken leg. But I bring things to market yet.

From Babies to Old Folks.

"I tell you, dear lady, I think I die if I do not come. These are my friends," and her worn, brown hands indicate the women in the stalls around her. "I know them a long time, since I bring my babies here. They were in cradles then, the babies. And I sew their petticoats while customers think what they buy. Now they are grown up, those little babies. They are old men and women with many children.

"But I come here, and I forget I am old and they are growing old. I sit here, and I hear the people coming to market, and I close my eyes and I see them sleeping in their cradles under the stall. And I reach out my hand for my sewing and there are no petticoats to sew. Yes, ma'am," to a customer who has came up. "String beans, yes ma'am, Seven cents a pound." And she limps on her broken leg as she reaches for a brown paper bag.

Withered, unbelievably old, her spryness mocking at age, is the colored woman who sells herbs just around the corner of the line. Spectators pause and buy, for who knows, there may be some magic in herbs, and the worldly-wise marketer slips the brown bag containing white root into her basket.

Cure for Baby's Colic.

"Get your shopping bags, ladies; 5 cents apiece!" yells a small, dirty little boy, as he shoves through the crowd of shoppers. "Right here, ladies; get your shopping bags!"

Her smile is expansive, heartwarming. Generous and kind, she is, and beloved by all the families "on the line."

For 35 years she and her sister, Annie, have been bringing their vegetables to the market. She laughs, a joyous laugh, that makes the marketers smile as they go about their marketing.

"The market, when I first saw it I was still on a pillow." Her stall, she says proudly, was inherited from her mother. Across the aisle is her niece, Irene, who first came "on the line" as a child, and now has a daughter big enough to help her with the work.

Life Centers in the Market.

Irene is shy and gentle, brown and elfin. Life for her has always centered around the market. Did she not meet her husband there, and her children served their time in boxes under the stalls? Like it? She loves it.

"No, miss, I ain't been here many years, just 35 years, miss." And Virginia Day—Adams now she has taken unto herself a fourth husband—smiles, revealing white teeth, interspersed with black gaps.

"I reckon I'm the last of my gang, miss," she says. "When I set down they all set down. Sho' I like the market. I stay home two days and I'm miserable. I got my last husband on the market too. Yes, ma'am, and he sho' is a bargain. I'm learning him to work, poah folks have to work."

Oh, yes, the line is as pleasant and human as ever. Green peas are just as green, and young cymblings just as yellow. And folks make a living and cheerily call from one stall to another.

"But most of the old 'uns are gone, ma'am. Look at me. I've only been here 15 years. I don't know much about this market. Them that I knew is gone. Buy a peach? Why, young miss, I wouldn't let you do that. Just take one and keep it, miss. Just go on and take it. Sure, it is a little thing to give away."

QUIET HOUR "ON THE LINE" at the O Street Market is lunch hour for Katie Bartz, who first saw the market from the pillow her mother carried her there on before she could walk. Katie has been selling vegetables to housewives for 35 years, she was cradled under the stalls and inherited her mother's "stand."

Mrs. Langer's Star Is Rising In Northwest

Republican Nominee for Governor Famous as Hostess.

The woman is Mrs. Lydia Cady Langer, whose father designed New York's famed Metropolitan Opera House.

She married William Langer in 1918 when he was attorney general of North Dakota. Only immediate relatives were invited to the ceremony in her father's home on New York's Riverside Drive.

Now she is the Republican nominee for Governor of her adopted State, an honor from which her husband retired after being chosen in the party primary. He and his backers concluded his right to run would be challenged on the ground that his sentencing for a Federal felony had annulled his citizenship rights.

Campaigned for Husband.

She stepped from the politically obscure background of her home life into political turmoil little more than two months ago—to campaign for her husband's renomination for Governor as he sat in Federal court on trial for defrauding the Federal Government.

Since his conviction and removal, she has increased her activities, speaking in every section of the State.

Into scores of homes of German farmers she has gone, to visit, to compare notes with the hausfrau, to solidify support. So well did she succeed that many considered her the logical successor to her husband as Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Slight of build, gracious and nearly always smiling, Mrs. Langer has proved as capable a campaigner as a housewife.

Is Able Hostess.

Her abilities as a hostess are nearly legend. Supporters of "Bill" tell how she prepared for 60 guests —farmers visiting Langer at the capitol—within an hour one night.

Although emphatic in her support of her husband's policies, she is more interested in the direction of her home.

On the walls of the Governor's mansion hang musical instruments which have been in her family for scores of years. A lute, a zither and an age-worn tambourine, all more than 300 years old, are a part of her collection.

Life for her in the past few months has become equally divided between the political fight for what she and her husband believe is just and her home.

Alice Bridges Expects to Set New Records

Has Only Been Swimming in Competition for Two Years.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

"I EXPECT to break Eleanor Holm Jarrett's present records within a few months," says Alice Bridges, winner recently of her first National swimming championship, the 220-yard backstroke title, which Mrs. Jarrett did not defend.

Miss Bridges, who has only been swimming in competition for two years, has won all the New England sectional free-style and backstroke titles, and holds ten American and world records. The day that she left for the National meet at Detroit she broke the American record for the 200-yard backstroke event at Manhattan Beach.

Aims at Olympics.

"My coach, Earle Spencer, has been holding me back for future success in Olympic games," Miss Bridges says.

A pointer toward that future is the fact that in setting the record at Manhattan Beach she clipped more than 8 seconds from the 11-year-old record of the late Sybil Bauer. Her time in the 220-yard event at Detroit was 3:00.6 seconds. Eleanor Holm Jarrett's world speed record stands at 2:57.8 seconds.

Miss Bridges' home is in Whitinsville, Mass. Her main interests outside of swimming are art and music. For the next few years she will combine art study and swimming.

Her Next Meet.

High interest is centered on Miss Bridges' showing in her next meet. She has been invited to compete in one of the women's events at the mixed swimming meet to be held August 11 at Manhattan Beach.

"My present stroke is O. K. for any record on the books," Alice Bridges says.

ART AND MUSIC are other interests of Alice Bridges, above, new National swimming champion in the 220-yard backstroke. Her home is at Whitinsville, Mass., and her ambition is to top Eleanor Holm Jarrett's present records in the next few months.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am 16 and this winter will be my last year in high school. My problem is this. I have an older sister and brother, aged 20 and 22, respectively. They and my parents insist on treating me as though I were a child.

My mother doesn't even allow me to choose my own clothes. She goes along with me and picks them out and the result is I am dressed like a 12-year-old. If any of my crowd is around when my sister has a date, she treats us very patronizingly and tells us to run along and play. If we go out on the porch, my mother comes along as chaperone.

• • • •

My brother has told my parents, in my hearing, that I am too young to have regular dates.

Can anything be done to bring my family to a more humane and considerate attitude?

MARGOT.

What About Father?

DEAR MARGOT: Since, of all your family, your father alone escapes reproach in the matter of injuring your 16-year-old dignity, why not appeal to him as a possible ally?

• • • •

If he puts his foot down on sister and brother's patronizing attitude, and insists they treat you and your friends with more respect, it's possible they'll give you a wider berth and fewer unsolicited opinions in the future.

• • • •

Perhaps you and your father together could persuade mother to let him chaperone you on your next shopping trip.

• • • •

Abide by your father's decision in the matter of a steady beau, and ask him to persuade mother not to chaperone you too closely.

Women Need Not Dread Father Time

Gracious Acceptance of Middle Age May Give Added Charm.

By Frances Mangum.

WAVING a beruffled organdy frock in front of Father Time won't frighten him away. Hiding behind a heavily rouged exterior will prove of no avail.

The harder one dodges him and fights him off, the more persistent he becomes. It's best to put out your hand, say "How do you do?" and accept him graciously. The more adaptable you are, the kinder he is.

If he is ignored he takes immediate toll with wrinkles and sagging muscles. He's an expert in giving you a matronly look.

Treat Him Kindly.

If you're kind to him he passes you by with a light touch and may even give you a certain mature charm that even the twixteens envy. It all depends on how he is met.

The first step to intelligent adaptability is a periodic health examination by a doctor. Find out just how you stand so you won't be catapulted all at once into the many forms of ill health that pry on the body as it ages.

Make a study of health. Find out what to eat. Learn what the effects of different foods are on the body and proceed to regulate your diet.

Exercises Needed.

Overcome that prejudice for exercises. The mature woman must take them to preserve a slim and lithe figure. They enable her to sleep better and give her a strength and vitality that she needs now as she never did before. They will help her develop a good posture, one of the prime factors in a youthful appearance.

It isn't necessary for her to take up golf or tennis, or even join a gym class. Just let her get out and walk. A brisk stroll of at least a mile will keep her in fine trim.

Mental discipline becomes especially important in the forties. She should develop an interest in outside things, even cultivate a hobby.

PILLAR TO POST

G. W. U. Professors Forget Their Knowledge at Outing.

A DEAN of George Washington University looked bewildered when somebody thumped him on the back and said patronizingly: "Good team work, professor!"

The dean had just been put out at first base in the game between the summer school faculty and the administrative personnel, and keenly feeling the ignominy of having made a hit so short that the ball rolled right at the feet of the pitcher, he couldn't understand why anybody should be congratulating him. He looked at the fellow suspiciously for evidences of sarcasm, until he explained:

• • • •

"That sacrifice bunt showed you were using your head!" Then the dean beamed with pleasure. Perhaps he had never been so tickled before on being told that he had been using his head. But for the most part the professors forgot their heads so crammed with knowledge, and gamboled about on Dean Robert W. Bolwell's wide acres last Saturday afternoon with their dignity lying in tattered shreds all over the place.

• • • •

Having left their erudition in the dressing room with their hats, they pretended that it was difficult to find a "literate" among them who knew enough about mathematics to keep score.

THE game between the professors and "those who work" as Dean Bolwell laughingly termed the other school employes ended with the former victorious, due, no doubt, to such unconscious skill as that displayed by the dean who had made the "sacrifice bunt." Three deans took part in the game; Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, Dean W. C. Ruediger and the host, Dean Bolwell.

• • • •

Everybody employed at the school was invited to the party including President Cloyd Heck Marvin and the stenographers. Bulging muscles were of more use in casting horse shoes than bulging brows and in this game a young electrician found himself on an equal footing with the most-learned savant, and a smug pedagogue was badly licked at croquet by a snub-nosed, laughing eyed telephone girl.

• • • •

Prof. Colin Mackall, of the chemistry department, was partial to the swimming pool of the estate Southport, and found the cold spring water that filled it stimulating. Others shrank from going into the water but were stimulated into quoting from the classics by the idyllic setting of the pool.

BETTY GLASSFORD PARKE comes by her flair for costume designing honestly, since her father, Gen. Pelham Glassford, is an artist by avocation. He was famous for painting lovely fireplace screens long before he became Washington's most famous chief of police. For relaxation he spent what little time he could snatch from his arduous duties painting in his Georgetown studio, even while the brickbats, both literal and figurative, were flying in the soldier bonus controversy.

• • • •

Brought up in an artistic atmosphere, Betty turned to costume designing, and while she was on the West Coast, spending her honeymoon with Lieut. Lee Parke, U. S. N., she took the opportunity to visit all the moving picture studios with an eye for the fall styles. The coats, she says, are all going to have big stand-up collars and huge cuffs, emphasizing the slenderness of the rest of the figure. There will be long trains for formal wear in the evening, arms will be partially covered with drapes, sleevelets and epaulets and the backs of evening gowns will be nonexistent, the bareness outlined more gracefully than heretofore.

• • • •

By the way, Betty is tickled to be back in Washington. Her husband has a two-year tour of duty here, and they are getting settled in a home on Foxhall road.

Coal-Black Pancake Hat Seen for Autumn

One Lilly Dache Design Called Watteau; Has Beret Leanings.

Held on by Bandeaus; Soft Felt Gives to Shape of the Head.

Its name is the Watteau hat, after the French painter; and it isn't a beret, though it has beret leanings.

One of her models donned this crownless circle of felt today, pulled it down here and there, and adjusted a black velvet bandeau on the under side. It stayed on, and looked like a hat—a successful hat.

The bandeaus hold it on, and the soft felt gives to the shape of the head. The felt pancake is double for about three inches around the rim, and this gives it durability.

As the season progresses, hats will get smaller, this designer believes. She expect many women to be in little hats by midwinter.

She showed a number of fall toques—shallow forward-dipping affairs, sometimes wreathed with wisps of aigrette. In spirit, these little toques are related to the Empress Eugenie hat that turned the hat world almost upside down several years ago.

And there were tricornes—with two points either at back or front, and little veils before or behind.

Useless Intellectual Studies Condemned

New York, Aug. 3 (Spl.).—American schools are sending forth students who are "dressed up intellectually, but have no place to go," deplored William E. Grady, superintendent of city schools, yesterday, discussing the continuation schools to which many unemployed adults and adolescents have been driven by the depression.

Mr. Grady urged better housing for students and remarked that "some students are in buildings that resound with the turmoil of Civil War draft riots." He advised educators to modernize their courses rather than cling to "an ancient cultural tradition."

Monkey Research Puts Start Of Man Back 16,000,000 Years

THE RECENT discovery of Dr. Solly Zuckerman that the blood serum of man is more closely related to that of Old World monkeys than that of New World monkeys confirms the belief that man is enormously older than has been supposed.

The announcement may help solve the riddle of evolution, for it tends to push man's beginnings on earth back to the Oligocene era, approximately 16,000,000 years ago.

Dr. Zuckerman, who has just completed two years of research work at Yale University, recently described his findings to members of the Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences at the London session.

Scientists have long known that anthropoid apes of the Old World, such as chimpanzees, have the same groups of blood cells as man, and that in this respect apes differ from Old World and New World monkeys.

Now Dr. Zuckerman has found the additional fact that serum proteins in the blood of Old World apes and monkeys are related to man's, but not to those of New World monkeys.

Revelation of this fact reveals that the whole Old World group split off in incredibly distant times from a common stock, which presumably also gave origin to the New World monkeys. It also suggests, according to Dr. Zuckerman, that independent human, or human-like stock, branched from the apes very early in geological time.

Sports Equipment Factory Paying for College Studies

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Aug. 1 (AP). The ambition of three young men to educate themselves in medicine created one of the flourishing industries of Independence. It is now 10 years old and distributing its product nationally.

It is the factory for turning out archery tackle, field hockey sticks and fire-by-friction sets, which was organized by Alvin and Orvar Swenson, brothers, and Dudley Smith while the three were still in high school.

At first it was merely a table in the basement of the Swenson home. Now it's a building by a railway siding, using wood imported by the carload from Cuba, New Mexico, Africa and the Pacific Northwest.

The first "graduate" of the factory, is now Dr. Dudley Smith, orthopedic surgeon in University Hospital, San Francisco. Alvin Swenson, with a degree from the University of Kansas, and Orvar with one from William Jewell College, have a year's work to their credit at Harvard Medical School.

This fall, leaving the factory in the hands of associates whom they have trained, the brothers will resume their work together at Harvard. Alvin is 27 years old and Orvar, 25.

It was Dr. Smith's skill as a Boy Scout in making fire by friction that gave the three lads the idea for their factory. When Dudley set a record for speed with the fire sticks, they decided to capitalize on his fame and manufacture friction fire sets. Archery sets soon were added, then field hockey sticks.

2,250 Jam Club to See Dempsey

By Bill McCormick.

SOME 2,250 idol-worshiping Washingtonians jammed into the Riding and Hunt Club last night for a peek at Jack Dempsey. Had it not been for the District Fire Department, which ordered the box office closed some time before ring time, there might just as well have been 5,000 idol-worshipping Washingtonians jammed into the Riding and Hunt Club for a peek at Jack Dempsey. In fact, there might just as well have been 10,000 &c., &c., doing ditto and ditto.

Dempsey ingratiated himself with those among the spectators who were not already convinced that he was the greatest guy since George Washington, accepted a baby blue sweater for his daughter, Joan, presented by the management and went to work in a business-like manner to referee two bouts, the first of which featured Roddy Davis and Joey Zoda in a body-punching session.

Davis Given Nod.

At the end of eight gruelling rounds, Davis was announced the winner, but Dempsey voted for Zoda and who are we to argue with the greatest guy since George Washington? On The Post score sheet Zoda jumped into an early lead by outboxing the Northeast neophyte, who seems destined never to be anything else in the ring racket, but Davis starrted countering with a sizzling left uppercut to the heart in the third to hold the none-too-game New Yorker even. He uncorked a series of counter-punches in the fourth, which he took by a wide margin, but faded in the fifth, which was even. In the sixth, Zoda started ripping into Davis, midsection, eking out a narrow margin, but he took the seventh decisively and dropped the finale by a very close edge.

Dempsey awarded Zoda three rounds, called three even and gave Davis two rounds. Judges Howard Livingston and Denny Hughes elected Davis by a landslide and thus passed our local ocffials' first encounter with the old man mauler.

Carl Guggenia Wins.

Carl Guggenia, Florida's fast little featherweight, stepped high, wide and handsome to eke out a very close decision over Skippy Allen, of New York, a last-minute substitute for Al Rigonne, in the third of the feature eights. Rigonne's enforced absence was caused by an eye injury received in an eleventh hour training session, but perhaps it was just as well for him. Guggenia peppered Allen from all angles and with every kind of a punch but a hard one, as the rugged little New Yorker kept plowing in landing just enough dynamite wallops to almost win him the decision.

Guggenia boxed beautifully and threw so many punches that for a while Allen must have thought some one had dumped a carload of boxing gloves on him through the skylight. The ultimate loser tossed a nice right hand to the heart and body, however, to accomplish the "slowing up" business which almost made him a winner.

OSLO, Aug. 6 (AP).—America's touring athletes swept through the final day of the international track and field meet today, winning seven events as big Ben Eastman, former Stanford middle distance star, and Percy Beard, New York A. C. hurdler, bettered world records.

Eastman raced 500 meters in one minute, two seconds as compared to the listed world record of 1:03 made in 1929 by E. Tavenari, of Italy. Beard, sprinting over the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.2 seconds, not only bettered the listed world mark of 14.4, shared by George Saling, Iowa; E. Wennstrom, Sweden, and B. Sjostedt, Finland, but shaved one-tenth of a second from the time of 14.3 seconds made by Johnny Morris, Louisiana State, in the last National championships.

Brinceton's Bill Bonthron, holder of the world record for 1,500 meters, won his specialty in 3:54.4, nearly six seconds slower than the mark of 3:48.8 he made in the Nationals.

Glen Hardin, of Louisiana State, raced to victory in the 300 meters in 33.6 seconds. Eulace Peacock, Temple University freshman, won the 100-meter dash in 10.3. Bob Kane, Cornell University quarter-miler, stepped the 400 meters in 47.9 to win his event and Cornelius Johnson, of Compton, Calif., Junior College, leaped 1.93 meters (6 feet 4 inches) to win the high jump.

Cliff Spencer Is Third at Bedford

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Cliff Spencer, professional at Beaver Dam Country Club near Washington, won third prize money in the Bedford Springs open golf tournament which was won today by Peter O'Hara, veteran Pittsburgher, who carded rounds of 71—69—140.

Spencer, pacing the Washington contingent of eight entered in the tournament, finished with a 143, 2 strokes back of Sam Parks, jr, pro at the South Hills course, Pittsburgh. A 10-foot putt for a birdie three on the last green gave O'Hara his margin of victory.

After taking 77 strokes in the morning, Al Treder, Manor pro, rallied in the afternoon for a 71. A 6 and 7 on the incoming nine proved costly to Treder on his first 18-hole voyage. George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, carded 76—74—150 and Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, 151. Leo Walper, Washington pro, withdrew after scoring an 80 in the morning, and Peter Jackson also withdrew. Harry C. Peacock, of Indian Spring, father of Roger, shot 85—85—169.

Gehrig's Spurt Dates From Blow on Head

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP).—If you see an ambitious young ball player deliberately trying to get his head in the way of somebody's fast one, don't send for the man with the butterfly net. The young fellow may only be seeking the secret of Lou Gehrig's phenomenal home-run hitting spurt.

The burly iron man of the majors has 36 homers to his credit today, and he stands five days ahead of the pace Babe Ruth set in 1927 when he popped exactly 60. Lou has hit six in the seven games of the Yankees' home stand at the stadium. Not content with homers alone, he has lifted his batting average 20 points to .383 in that short time.

Going back to June 29 for the possible cause of it all, Gehrig was parked peacefully at the plate in an exhibition game in Norfolk, Va., when Ray White, young right-hand farm hand of the Yanks, lost control of his hard high one. The ball bounced off Lou's durable skull and down he went for a long count.

Three Triples Next.

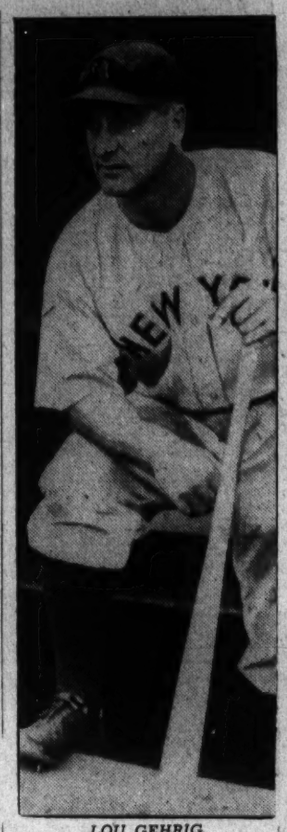
Most people would have come up with a brain concussion at least, but instead Lou came up with three triples in the next big league game with Washington two days later. Instead of a head full of cobwebs, he had an eye like Daniel Boone and a heart full of malice toward all pitchers. He's been a hitting maniac ever since.

"It didn't do me any good at the time," says Lou ruefully, still rubbing a spot tender in memory. "But it couldn't have done me any harm."

The figures bear him out. He had 20 home runs when White beaned him. Five days more than a month have elapsed since, and in that time he has hit 16 more. The fastest pace even Ruth ever set was in September of 1927 when he busted 17 in the closing month to set his great record.

Couldn't Get Going.

On August 3 of 1927, the Babe's great year, Gehrig hit two homers and actually was two ahead of the king. But swing as he did with all his might and main, he couldn't get going again. Through the remainder of the season, baffled Louie hit only 10 more for a total of 47, while the Babe steamed majestically along, getting nine more in August,



LOU GEHRIG.

But Ruth doesn't live on the heights any more where the home runs are totaled. Wearily playing out the last year's string, the Babe has accumulated only 18 so far, just half Gehrig's output.

Lou's big fear is that some one will bean Jimmy Foxx, who has 34, with the same kind of ball that nicked him.

Share in Rosenbloom Bought by George Raft

Los Angeles, Aug. 6 (AP).—George Raft, screen star, said today he had purchased a half interest in Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight boxing champion, for "around $10,000."

Raft, himself a former fighter, said he would second Rosenbloom in a fight Wednesday with Pietri Georgi at Oakland. Raft and Rosenbloom were friends in New York.

Endeavour Is Making Good Progress to U. S.

Aboard the Yacht, Endeavour, at Sea, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—Sweeping along before a light but rising north-northwest wind, Endeavour, the America's Cup challenger, today was making good progress in her journey to Newport a day's run of 178 miles was logged at noon.

Endeavour's position then was 39.33 north latitude and 63.35 west longitude. The barometer was 30.08 and rising. All was well.

New Yorkers Lead, 11-5, For Year

Manush and Harris Will Be Available in Drive for 4th Place.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

WASHINGTON'S recently inaugurated drive for a first division berth, which has netted almost as many victories in the last five games as it won during the entire recent Western trip, encounters a serious obstacle this afternoon in the form of a double-header with Joe McCarthy's Yankees. The first game starts at 1:30 o'clock.

Though separated by a mere 16½ games and battling toward two entirely different goals, the boys will be hammering at one another this afternoon with the same vigor and vitality that marked their meetings last season when the Yanks fought a losing battle with the Washington club for the penant. This season has seen a strangely different story unfolded, however. The Nats won a majority of games between the two in '33, but the Yanks boast an 11-5 advantage in that respect at the current writing.

Weaver, Stewart Named.

Monte Weaver and Walter Stewart are are Joe Cronin's mound nominees for the home team. McCarthy's selections hover around Johnny Broaca and Red Ruffing, a pair of twirlers who have enjoyed marked success against the Griffith boys this season.

Though he started in a manner that augured well for his continued good work on the mound, Weaver has slowly slipped back into the rut that has been a final resting place of all Washington hurlers this season. Weaver's victories outnumber his defeats, however, he having won 10 games and lost 7. Stewart's record for the season is 5 wins in 11 starts.

Though Cronin has been whistling like a small boy in the dark to keep his spirits aloft, 'Frisco seriously thinks the club has a good chance of sneaking up on the Red Sox to cop fourth place money, with an outside, very outside, chance of getting into the third hole.

Manush, Harris Available.

Continued aggravation of Heine Manush's injury and ditto for Dave Harris have been heavy blows to Washington's first-division aspirations. Both will be available for duty this afternoon though Manush may not go the entire distance out of deference to his bad leg.

District Junior Golfers Compete at Columbia Today in Second "Field Day" Series

McLeod Host To Young Stars

Detweiler, Nee Favored to Win Top Honors in Feature Event.

THE second of a series of junior "field days" leading up to the annual District junior golf championship will be staged today at Columbia Country Club's course, starting at 9:30 o'clock.

McLeod to Lecture.

Fred McLeod, veteran Columbia pro, will lecture on some phase of the golf game and the kids hope it will be on trap shooting.

Next week's "field day" will be held at Washington Golf and Country Club. The juniors are taking advantage of the opportunity to sharpen their weapons for the big championship at Indian Spring September 5-6-7.

Public links golfers are looking forward to two more tournaments—the "Uptown" championship at Rock Creek and the Anacostia "Open" event. E. Harry Graham, Rock Creek course manager, recently returned from Pittsburgh, where he chaperoned the five District qualifiers in the National Public Links championship, plans to put on the "Uptown" tournament late this month or early in September. It was won last year by Claude Rippy.

Philip H. Lightfoot, manager at Anacostia, indicated yesterday that he planned to start the Anacostia tournament, won last fall by Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, around the middle of September. Lightfoot had hoped to begin the tournament much earlier, but the "Japanese beetles have been giving our course a fit," to use his own expression, and he does not expect the greens and fairways to be in tip-top shape for tournament play until the next few weeks.

Federal One-Day Event.

Federal employes will hold a one-day golf tournament at Beaver Dam, Wednesday, August 15. There will be 18 holes medal play handicap, with a number of prizes to be awarded. Prominent District golfers, such as John R. Miller, former Beaver Dam champion; Tom Belshe, of Indian Spring, and Johnny Lynch will participate.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, has changed the day of his women's golf classes from Thursday to Wednesday, the same day he instructs the junior golfers.

Army and Navy Country Club will send a ten-man golf team to Richmond Sunday to engage the Country Club of Virginia at the James River course. Maj. Dick Sutherland, club champion, who has been vacationing in New England and West Virginia, is expected back this week and will play with Capt. Kendall J. Fielder against Billy Howell and Doug Call, No. 1 and 2 golfers from Richmond.

A number of District golfers will trek over to Hillendale's course tomorrow to vie in the Maryland State Golf Association's 18-hole sweepstakes. Pros also have been invited to play from scratch.

Dick Hanley of Northwester, had slipped to third place with 85,529, and Jimmy Crowley of Fordham, was close up with 85,520. Harry Kipke of Michigan, followed with 83,569.

Jefferson All-Stars Are Triumphant, 3 to 1

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—The Jefferson County All-Stars nine defeated the Charles Town All-Time Baseball Team on Woody's Field here today, 3 to 1.

Walters, pitching for the All-Stars, allowed but two bingles, while his mates were busy garnering seven from the slants of Kersner, the All-Time slabman. McCarty and Willingham led the attack for the winners with two hits each.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP). The quest for the historic Longwood bowl, one of tennis' most prized trophies, regained some of its old time luster today when one of the best fields of the current Eastern grass season played two rounds, totaling 46 matches, without semblance of an upset.

The entry list contained 10 of the Nation's 30 outstanding players, with the second ranking Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., topping the seeded list of eight.

The Texan, whose Eastern campaign was interrupted by a needless trip to the Davis Cup front at Wimbledon, dropped but five games in his two-round advance. He swept through W. L. Van Alen, of Newport, R. I., 6—1, 6—1, in the first round and gained the third bracket by overwhelming J. C. Challis, jr., from his native State, 6—1, 6—2.

Grant Back in Form.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, the second-seeded mite from Atlanta, appeared back in form while registering straight set victories over W. L. Taliaferro, Boston, and William Clothier, jr., Philadelphia.

Frankie Parker, seeded third, played but one match. He benefited by a first-round default and then smeared Dwight Robinson, one of the Longwood contingent, 6—1, 6—1. Berkeley Bell, the stumbling New York-Texan, did not even get started. He was seeded fourth and, after his initial rival defaulted, his second round match was put over until tomorrow.

The other seeded players to keep pace with the leaders were Johnny Van Ryn, Philadelphia; Jack Tidball, Hollywood, Calif.; bespectacled Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, who has been going great guns this season, and another promising comer, red-haired Don Budge, of San Francisco.

Doubles Opens Today.

The doubles play will open tomorrow with the National champions and Davis Cup victors, George Lott and Lester Stoeffen, heading the draw. This team play, however, will not get under way until the singles field has reduced itself to the round of eight. Judging from today's play, it will be a strictly seeded list affair.

Although Longwood Bowl tradition does not take in the women players, the invitation affair run in conjunction with this 42-year-old fixture takes on added significance this year because it is the final warm-up for the National championships.

Sarah Palfrey and Josephine Cruickshank, Wightman Cup stars, led the field into the third round. The only upset came when the fourth seeded Virginia Rice, of Boston, a Wightman Cup spare, finished on the short end of her 6—4, 11—9 marathon with the unseeded Marianne Hunt, of Los Angeles.

The other favored players to survive were Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia; Jane Sharp, Los Angeles; Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter, Dedham; Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, Kansas City, and Katherine Winthrop, Boston.

Men's Singles.

First round—Edward Jacobs, Baltimore, defeated John Ray, Cambridge, 6—4, 6—4; Edward Fuller, Salem, defeated Ray White, Dallas, Tex., 6—4, 6—3; Jack Tidball, Hollywood, Calif., defeated Norman Drake, Boston, 6—0, 6—4; Bryan Grant, Atlanta, defeated W. L. Taliaferro, Boston, 6—2, 6—2; Charles Harris, Boston, defeated T. E. Jensen, jr., Boston, 6—2, 6—4; R. Casper Nannes, New Brunswick, N. J., defeated Paul Guibord, Melrose, 6—4, 6—4; Berkeley Bell, New York, won by default from Robert Thurber, Boston; Donald Budge, San Francisco, defeated G. H. Perkins, Boston, 6—4, 6—4; Henry Prusoff, Seattle, Wash., defeated John Barr, Dallas, Tex., 6—4, 6—4; R. L. Tower, Boston, won by default from Bertram Weltens, Dallas, Tex. Albert Law, New York, won by default from Sam Fitch, Brookline.

Second round—Allison defeated Challis, 6—1, 6—2; Prussoff defeated Reese, 6—2, 6—2; Bryan defeated Boulware, 6—3, 6—0; Parker defeated Robinson, 6—1, 6—1; McAluff defeated Tower, 6—3, 8—6.

Van Ryn defeated Tilden, 6—4, 6—2; Davenport defeated Turnbull, 6—3, 6—1; Grant defeated Clothier, 6—0, 6—1; Fuller defeated Nannes, 6—3, 6—4; Budge won by default from Law.

Cronin thinks if the Indians can finish their Eastern invasion with more games won than lost—considerably more—they may sneak over the line a winner.

Back From Parched Mid-West, Pixlee Enjoys 'the Cold' Here

COACH JAMES E. PIXLEE, the quiet-voiced custodian of George Washington University's football future, took off his natty-looking panama hat and perched himself securely atop an office desk with a very satisfied expression on his face. The satisfied expression was because of the weather.

The weather in Washington is extremely pleasing to Coach Pixlee. It seems that Mr. Pixlee has just returned from the drought-stricken Middle West, where he has been spending what was supposed to be a vacation and coming to Washington from the heat of the Midwest is like hopping to the Arctic from the Equator, according to the good coach.

"It gets so hot out there," declared Coach Pixlee, "that a thunderstorm will come up and it will rain, but the rain will dry up before it hits the ground. The temperature sometimes gets down to 100 or so about 4 o'clock in the morning, but it's back up to 117 and 120 in the shade during the day."

Prospects Not Too Bright.

"Our prospects don't look any too optimistic," asserted Coach Pixlee, glancing at G. W.'s tremendous schedule of ten games lying on the desk. "In fact, if our sophomore material doesn't develop we're going to take five good lickings. Of our squad of 30 of last year, 18 have left school in one way or another. Only two backs from last year's team are returning, Plotnicki and Leemans.

"Last season we had about 16 backs ready for every game. This season we'll be lucky to have a dozen starting the season. All but two are sophs and it takes three inexperienced men like a sophomore to make one good player. Of the ten new backs, it will be a miracle if half of them develop into reliable men.

Cites Green Backfield.

"You know," Coach Pixlee went on, "even if your line is experienced, a green backfield can wreck your whole offense."

Anyway, it was remarked, G. W. probably would have a better season this year than last in respect to one thing, that is, injuries, and Coach Pixlee agreed.

"Last year," he said, "we had two broken legs, two broken collarbones, one broken hand and nine broken noses—all in the backfield, too. We had more injuries than I had seen before happen to a team in my 19 years of coaching.

"Some people might think this came from having a comparatively small squad. You know, we keep our squad cut down pretty closely to 30. They're wrong. A small squad cuts expenses and keeps the players trying harder for positions."

Pixlee was asked whom he thought might compose the "first team."

No First Team.

"I don't have any 'first' or 'second' teams," he said. "Some men are fitted to play against different combinations and others are better developed for other styles of play. You may use one man at a position against Tulsa and another against Vanderbilt because they don't play the same kind of football.

"Tuffy Leeman? Leeman isn't sure of his position by any means. He'll have to fight for a position. All of 'em will. Yes, I'll use the single-wing back formation with flexed end and unbalanced line."

A breeze came in the window and Coach Pixlee took a deep breath. "Boy, this is great weather," he said, and took another look at G. W.'s grim-looking ten-game schedule.

Playground Net Semifinals Reached

Nathan Ritzneberg Victor in Senior Division of Tourney.

THE semifinal round of the senior and junior Department of Playgrounds tennis championship was reached yesterday. Bucky Harris blames the poor form of Lefty Grove for Boston's low estate. It looks like the Yankees to Bucky. Too much pitching for the others, he avers.

Griff is angling for the services of a young pitcher in the Southern Association, but will have no definite word on the deal until the latter part of the week. Youngsters will be imported on a wholesale scale after the first of the month.

League Lead To Frederick Team

Frederick, Md., Aug. 6 (Spl.).—Frederick downed Taneytown, 16 to 3; Union Bridge defeated Middletown, 5 to 2; New Windsor set back Thurmont, 6 to 5, and Brunswick took the measure of Woodsboro, 15 to 7 in the county league.

Frederick's victory enabled the locals to regain first place in the pennant race, with Union Bridge one game removed from the leaders. Middletown and Thurmont are on even terms for third place.

The Frederick-Taneytown tilt on the latter's field was almost even until the seventh inning when R. Bollenger weakened and helped by errors, Frederick put over eight runs. Rice held the Carroll County team to six hits.

One Big Inning.

One big inning, the fourth when eight runs were scored settled the issue between Brunswick and Woodsboro. Twelve men faced three pitchers. Gaither started for Brunswick and after being touched up for four runs in fifth frame gave way to Phillips who allowed but two hits the remainder of the game.

Coming from behind New Windsor nosed out Thurmont. The Mountaineers scored four times in the first session. Shuff then relieved O'Farrell and held Thurmont to one run the remainder of the game. New Windsor evened the count in the fourth inning and won on singles by Fowble and Kimmey in the eighth inning.

Union Bridge won from Middletown in a pitcher's battle between Hauver and and Minnick in which honors were about even. Inability to hit with men on bases cost the valley team the game.

Mackenzie Sets Pace in Triumph

Roland Mackenzie, long-clouting Congressional pro, and his youthful protege, Billy Dettweiler, shot golf just a bit too hot for Fred McLeod, Columbia Club pro, and Maury Nee, yesterday at Columbia in a special 18-hole match, and triumphed, 2 up.

The match, bringing together a former open champion, his pupil, a former Walker Cup star, and two of the best junior golfers in the Middle Atlantic section, was thrillingly contested and saw Mackenzie and Dettweiler hang up the verdict with the aid of some deadly putting.

The Congressional pair was 1 up at the turn and even with their rivals going to the 270-yard seventeenth. Here Mackenzie trundled in a 15-putter for a birdie 3 to beat a couple of pars. On the home hole, a 420-yarder, Dettweiler stuck his second 25 feet from the pin and made victory complete with a sensational putt.

'Three Is Out'

Miss Parker, Fearing the Last Strike, to Quit 'Chute Jumping.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (Spl.).—There was a little parachute jumper by the name of Lucille Parker, a Virginian, at the women's National air races at Dayton, Ohio. She was entered in the parachute jumping contest, but none of the other contestants showed up so she gave an exhibition each day, thrilling the crowd with her delayed jump. The first day she waited until she was 500 feet from the ground before pulling her rip cord, and the second day she fell even closer before her pilot chute blossomed out, opened the big umbrella and settled her to the ground. I was over at the broadcasting and announcing booth the day she made her second jump and the announcer was saying, "Oh, Miss Parker is making a beautiful jump, a b-e-e-eyoutiful jump. Its really b-e-e-e-youtiful. Look how long she is waiting to pull that cord. What a thrill—what a thrill—"

Now through all this, the black speck which was Miss Parker was tumbling and spinning through the air closer and closer to the ground and most of us were beginning to draw in our breaths in agony when the chute opened and she came to earth. A few minutes later Miss Parker was driven up to the microphone.

Is Dusty and Pale.

She was dusty and pale, limping a little from a bad ankle, and her uniform was torn. She murmured the usual nothings into the microphone, but then added before she left, "And I have made my last jump. I'll never jump a chute again." The announcer said, "Indeed. And tell the folks, Miss Parker, why that was your last jump." But she shook her head and refused. I heard her reiterate two or three times to friends that she had made her last jump and I stretched an ear to see if I could overhear why. But she never would tell. I made up my mind I had to know.

Well, then Frances Harrell Marsalis fell and died so tragically that everything else was forgotten for a time but sympathy and collecting information. But while I was sitting in the administration office writing my story a tiny brunette with a pleasant smile came over and said: "I don't think you remember me, but I met you in New York. I want you to remember me to Joe Williams when you get back to New York. I am Miss Parker." It was the little parachute jumper and I all but threw my arms around her neck because it looked like a chance to find out why she had taken her last jump. Just then old Prof. Swanee Taylor came along and I made him guard Miss Parker until I finished by piece. Then I coaxed her to tell.

Terribly Scared.

"Well," she said, "I didn't want to talk about it. I'm still scared. I've never been so scared in all my life. I'm so scared that I'm through. Everybody thought I made two delayed jumps the last two days. Two days in a row my main chute failed to open and I have had to pull the emergency chute. Today I got the emergency open just in time. A second more would have been too late. The next time neither one will open. Three strikes is out in any league."

Now you have my word that the young lady was still able to smile and did so when she said this, and she was a young lady twice dead and still alive. She has made more than 30 jumps and never has had to use the emergency chute which all parachute jumpers must wear by order of the Department of Commerce. And then twice in a row, at an air meet at which death had marked off a victim, it happened. The first time

Carry Over, 5 to 1 Shot, Triumphs in Mile Event at Narragansett by Length

Easy Victor Is in Front All Way

Fort Springs, $21.60 Scores in Dash for 2-Year-Olds.

NARRAGANSETT, R. I., Aug. 6 (AP).—A pair of lightly regarded colts divided the honors at Narragansett today as Carry Over from the Wheatley Stable won the mile dash for 3-year-olds, and Hal Price Headley's Kentucky-owned Fort Springs led a smart field of 2-year-olds over 6 furlongs.

Carry Over, a winner of only one other race this year and paying $12.50 to win, stepped away from five others of his age to score by one length. With W. Saunders in the saddle, the son of St. Germans set all the pace and won handily in the fair time of 1:39 4-5. C. V. Whitney's Elf Lock, scratched from the Roger Williams Handicap Saturday, was second, beating Headley's Thomasville a length for the place.

Comes From Behind.

In contrast, Fort Springs, a consistent second-place horse at Detroit, came from behind to take the decision by a neck from the highly regarded Blackbirder, running for A. E. Silver. H. T. Archibald's Candy Prince led the five other juveniles to the wire.

Under 111 pounds and guided by Alfred Robertson, Fort Springs ran the three-quarters of a mile in 1:13 1-5 to pay his backers $21.60 for a $2 win ticket.

Royal Gold Victor.

Malolo, the favorite, jumped into the lead in the 6½-furlong event and managed to stay close in spite of the bandage which dragged in the muddy going. Malolo shed the handicap about 50 yards from the wire, but was unable to overhaul Royal Gold. The Chappel Brothers' Dee's Campfire was third.

Royal Gold, ridden by J. Kacala, paid $24.86 for each $2 straight ticket. The time was 1:20 4-5.

Deduce in Brilliant Win.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 6 (AP). Mrs. Henry Ughetta's consistent 5-year-old, Deduce, which has not been out of the money in races from 6 furlongs to 1⅛ miles this year, ran a spectacular race under Jockey Silvio Coucci to win the Burnt Hills Handicap, as the second week of sport at the Spa got under way today. The gelded son of Lucullite, which formerly ran for as little as $1,500 in claiming events, came with a mighty stretch bid to win by a head from A. G. Vanderbilt's Red Wagon, the favorite. Flying Hour, from the stable of Mrs. W. M. Jeffords, was beaten a scant half length for the place.

Deduce ran the fastest 6 furlongs of the meeting, 1:11 4-5. He paid $7 to $2.

The victory of Deduce gave Coucci a double.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Sacks, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Weiner and Dr. and Mrs. Dan Salman, all of Washington, hopped into their cars Sunday morning at 2 o'clock and away they went to Piney Point.

Landed 60 Rockfish.

They whiled away the morning hours at the Tolson Hotel, but from 2 to 8 o'clock in the afternoon they went fishing. Capt. Goldsborough took them across to Raggedy Point and, trolling with 2 ounce sinkers and No. 1 spoons, they landed 60 rockfish, 1 to 2 pounds.

Before the trip was over they added 7 trout, one of them a 4½-pounder, and 60 croakers, all big. And if you are of the opinion that croakers do not know how to grow big at Piney Point, just keep on reading.

Last week I began to be worried about Galesville, Shady Side and Herring Bay. Hadn't heard anything from them for so long a time. And I wondered whether the fish had stopped biting up that way or whether they were catching so many they didn't want others to know about it or something.

Yesterday morning I was in Alexandria, Va., and dropped into Hurshy's restaurant at King and Fairfax streets in a building erected in 1751, and just happened to pal in with Dr. W. C. West, prominent physician of that city, who was sitting all alone at one of the tables. The fried fish on his plate attracted my attention. I asked questions.

Big Haul of Croakers.

Sunday morning he told me, he and G. J. Hufford, also of Alexandria, drove over to Galesville, where they were joined by his brother, Dr F B. West, of West River, Md., and the three engaged one of Capt. John W. Smith's boats, out of Galesville.

They didn't go across the bay. They went down the bay and remained on this side of the channel. They fished from 5 until 11 p. m., and the lights from Cesapeake Beach were not far away.

They landed 100 croakers, 35 of them ranging between 3 and 5 pounds. They caught only one trout, and it was being slowly consumed while Dr. West was relating the story. . . . Morris certainly knows how to fry a fish and Nettie knows haw to dress it up for private consumption.

Joe Chauncey, merchant, just around the corner from Hurshy's, and his party of nine went to Kenwood Beach Sunday and engaged Capt. Everett Phillips. They sailed out from Kenwood, past Flagponds, far off Solomons, and across the channel to Hooper Island.

Alexandrians Lucky.

They landed all the small trout they wanted. They ran into one school of bluefish and landed six before they went down. They tried Northwest Middles for large trout, but landed large croakers instead.

While in Alexandria I called on Thomas Waddy, another merchant. He and Capt. Henry C. Egloff, of Walter Reed Hospital, made a recent catch of over 200 large croakers at Piney Point. I asked for details.

Golfer Mourns His Hole in One

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—For 20 years Ray Evans, captains' secretary at a Chicago police station, has been trying to make a hole in one. Yesterday he did it.

Today he wished he hadn't. Because he wanted to play golf he had wired his wife at Lake Geneva he couldn't join her "because of business." "Now what'll I do when she hears about that hole in one?" Ray wonders glumly.

2 Galveston Pitchers Purchased by Phillies

Philadelphia, Aug. 6 (AP).—Purchase of Orville Jorgens and Jim Bivin, pitchers, from the Galveston Club of the Texas League, was announced today by Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies.

The hurlers will not join the local National Leaguers until the 1935 spring training camp session gets under way. Wilson indicated the deal was a straight cash transaction.

They left Washington that Saturday morning at 4 o'clock. Breakfast was ready for them at the Piney Point Hotel when they arrived. At 7 o'clock their guide, Capt. Charlie, took them aboard, and they were off. The wind was southwest—almost west—so they went across to the Virginia side of the river. They drifted—and drifted—and landed all those fish. And they were all big, not one of them under 3 pounds.

Hagen's Open Under Way Today

Rochester, Home Town, to Pay "The Haig" Honor; 100 to Compete.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP). An imposing array of amateur and professional golf stars will match shots tomorrow in the $3,000 Rochester Centennial-Walter Hagen open championship, conceived to honor "The Haig," who toted bags and practiced his way to a pro's post here before leaving the home town to make good.

A feature of the city's 100th anniversary, it is the tribute of his home town to one of the most able and colorful figures in the game.

Most prominent pros are in the field. Some of them, unable to play in both, scratched entries in the Canadian Open last week to match shots with "The Haig" in his own tournament.

Thirty-six holes will be played Thursday by the 64 leaders and ties in tomorrow and Wednesday's 18-hole matches.

Play will be on the east course of Oak Hill, well-timbered and with water hazards on nine holes.

Is Difficult Course.

Its par 71, with tees set back for a total of more than 6,700 yards, is a difficult test. The course record is 67.

Paul Runyan, sensation of the winter circuit, will make his first appearance in competition as P. G. A. title holder. Runyan also passed up the Canadian Open to give Hagen a hand.

Among the more than 100 who will tee off tomorrow are Al Watrous, Detroit; Lloyd Gullickson, Cleveland; Dick Metz, Lake Forest, Ill.; Ky Laffoon, Denver, Johnny Farrell, Short Hills, N. J.; Willie MacFarlen, New York; "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, Louisville; Tom Greavy, Albany, N. Y.; Harry Cooper, Chicago; Mortie and Olin Dutra, Leo Diegel, Gene Sarazen, George von Elm and Denny Shute, of Philadelphia.

Extra, Race Fans! You Can Soon Pick Your Fish, and Bet

Several years ago race addicts began filling in the horseless days with mouse and turtle races. Firemen's carnivals, hospital benefits and then Sunday schools took up and developed the idea. By last fall cockroach handicaps and hurdle races for rats were on several programs.

Today the members of the Boost Brooklyn Association—Brooklyn being a Baltimore suburb—announced a 30-foot fish-racing track was being prepared for their annual booster meeting next month.

Phi Delta Kappa Tennis Advances to Semifinals

The semifinal stage of the Phi Delta Kappa tennis tournament was reached yesterday. Terneak defeated Weckerly, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4, 10—8, and Sim defeated Quisenberry, 6—3, 6—2, 9—7. MacFarlane defaulted to Woodward. The finals will be played this week.

The winner of the local chapter will compete in the National fraternity championship in September.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Narragansett Park, Aug. 6.

Looks like I might have stayed another week at Hawthorne at a profit as Marcella Miss, Cold Spell and Snaplock all stepped down as predicted and three other picks finished in the second hole.

Personally, I would rather be here with two winners a day than to have four at Hawthorne. There's class, plus "atmosphere" here, Al, and I hope that you can run up before the season closes.

Mike's one-horse wire, Try Fair, was nosed out today at Hawthorne and the Western Union refused to send the collect wire he tried to send me from Buffalo. Couldn't blame the manager at that, for it seems that Mike had not only lost the proverbial shirt but his trousers needed half-soling, too, so he was masquerading in a barrel. The dope is now that he is going over Niagara Falls for prize money, if he can get the barrel headed up. With the luck that boy is playing in, he is liable to keep bobbing along until he hits the muddy Ohio and anchors at Dade Park, but it is a cinch that he will be with the rail birds somewhere before the moon changes.

For my sake, as well as his own hide, I trust that he makes Pawtucket before Bill's return, for he is truly fond of the little imp.

Yours, JOE.

First race—A tough bunch for the day's opener. Migrate, Tuticurio and Alaric are as good as any.

Second race—Macadam should win this heat. The contention will come from Marge and Yap.

Seventh race—A good race to pass up. If you must bet, Black Patricia, Cold Spill and Boy Crazy are just about as good as any.

G. U. Footballers To Report Sept. 4

Capt. Saverine Will Head Squad of 35 Players.

Candidates for Georgetown's 1934 grid team will report at the Hilltop for their initial workout September 4, it was announced yesterday. A squad of 35, headed by Capt. Joe Saverine, is expected to heed Coach Jack Hagerty's summons for men. "Mush" Dubofsky and George Murtagh again will assist Hagerty.

Georgetown's game with Maryland, November 24 at College Park, is the outstanding attraction on the Hoyas' card and looms as one of the District's biggest games for the approaching season. The Blue and Gray will meet eight opponents, including New York U. and Western Maryland.

KOTERITO, never far back from the pace, obtained clear sailing on the inside leaving the back stretch, wore down WILROB in the last three-sixteenths and drew out as if much the best. WILROB had speed from the start, disposed of LEAFLET, but was unable to cope with the speed of the winner through the stretch. LEAFLET moved up steadily leaving the back stretch, but was unable to reach the first two under punishment. PLAYFUL MARTHA came with good courage at the end. LUCK IN faltered after displaying good speed for the first three furlongs. CASH SURRENDER, under steadying restraint in pursuit of the pace, was unable to improve his position when called upon.

BANNERS FLYING was not hurried during the opening quarter-mile, moved around on the outside leaving the back stretch and, closing stoutly through the closing furlong, wore down the leaders and was going away at the end. TELLWHY had good speed, shook off REIGH ROSE, was overtaken by both the winner and PASS, but came again to take the place in the last strides. PASS, under steadying restraint, moved up stoutly midway of the turn, wore down the pacemaker, but was unable to keep pace in the closing sixteenth. REIGH ROSE faltered after displaying good early speed. SUNNY SADIE tired badly.

ELF LOCK, permitted to settle into her best stride and outrun for the first half-mile, was taken to task rounding the far turn, moved up steadily, lost ground at the stretch turn, and, despite being placed under pressure, was never able to endanger the winner. THOMASVILLE, under reserve until nearing the half-mile ground, moved up steadily when called upon, but was unable to keep pace in the closing drive. SIR TEN faltered when the real racing began. Stocks Decline One-Tenth in Quiet Trading

New York, Aug. 6 (AP). — Overshadowed in speculative interest by the rising grain market, stocks resumed a quiet course today after a short-lived early burst of selling.

Most of the early losses were regained on a moderate rally led by non-ferrous metal shares. After the close of the market General Motors directors ordered a 50-cent extra dividend.

U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Howe Sound, McIntyre, Alaska Juneau and Dome Mines rose 1 to nearly 6 points in active trading.

Volume Increases.

Early general selling and the later flurry in metal shares contributed chiefly to an increase in the volume to 783,950 shares compared with 465,910 Friday.

Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania and other important railroad shares declined about 1 to 4 points to new 1934 lows after the opening, as the Saturday decline was extended sharply. Rails recouped most of their losses before the finish, however, New York Central rallying to finish nearly a point higher.

Final prices on the whole were little changed, the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks showed a loss of only one-tenth of a point at 69.3.

Inflation talk did not help the bond market and a slow decline in U. S. Government issues was extended. The dollar, however, was steady in foreign exchange dealings.

Steel Operations Fall.

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated steel operations this week at 25.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 26.1 per cent a week ago. Some observers attached significance to scattered buying of scrap iron as portending a possible pick-up in steel activity later in the month.

International Nickel advanced to close fractionally higher after directors had voted an increase in the quarterly dividend to 15 cents, compared with 10 cents a share previously.

By Ralph West Robey.

By Ralph West Robey.

Recent defections of various local unions from the American Federation of Labor emphasize a new one of the basic problems that confront American labor today. Sooner or later some decision must be made on the question of the kind of organization that is to represent the workers. The situation at present is unsatisfactory to labor, to employers, and to those in the Government charged with the responsibility of trying to prevent disputes.

The basic cause of the trouble arises from the fact that the American Federation of Labor no longer fits our industrial and business organization. It developed in a time when competition was by units of an industry. It was not a question of the industry or trade operating as a whole. Each unit strove, to gain as much of its market as it could.

Employers Used Wages as a Powerful Competitive Weapon.

Under these conditions there was a constant temptation for employers to use their workers as a competitive weapon. If they reduced wages or lengthened hours, their cost of production would be reduced. They could lower their prices. They could undersell their competitors.

To guard against such a contingency it was advisable for the employes to combine in trade unions. Through these they could assure that every employer in a trade would have to pay the same wages. Competition would have to be on some other basis. It would have to come through managerial efficiency, technological improvements or superiority of location.

Further, in these circumstances there was a certain advantage to having a central direction. It provided an element of cohesion that could reach beyond the limits of the immediate industry affected. The American Federation of Labor, through giving this direction, performed a real service for the workers.

Employers' Organizations Have Outmoded Trade Unions.

In more recent years, with the development of employers' associations of one kind and another, trade unions became unsatisfactory. The need no longer was to assure that all employers would pay the same wage. It was to assure that the employes of an industry could operate as a unit —something that they can not, or at least do not, do under a system of trade unions.

With the organization of the NRA this tendency for industries to combine and operate as a unit was made practically mandatory. Uniform wages were fixed by the code authority. Hours of work were determined by general agreement. Conditions of competition were regulated. The industry became not a composite of independent organizations, but a unit putting up a solid front.

To meet this situation it is imperative that labor be able to put up an equally solid front. The American Federation of Labor is unable to do this. It can be done only through an industrial union. As labor moves more and more in the direction of such industrial unions through breaking away from the A. F. of L., therefore, it is taking a step that will redound to its own good.

Bond Market Drops Slightly; Federals Yield

Prime Investments Hold; Trading Climbs to $8,536,000.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Secondary bonds followed the trend of stocks and were generally lower today, although prime investment issues held up fairly well and in some instances made modest gains. Governments yielded slightly.

Transfers approximated $8,536,000, compared with $8,034,000 on Friday and Standard Statistics Co. Average of 60 domestic corporate bonds declined one-tenth of a point to 84.5.

The general list improved somewhat in the late trading although the demand was insufficient to overcome the earlier easiness, and the majority finished with moderate declines on the day.

Some Losses Noted.

Losses occurred in some obligations of the Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, Erie, International Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New Orleans Public Service, New Haven, New York Central, Pacific Telephone, Pere Marquette, Postal Telegraph, Richfield Oil, Southern Railway, Texas & Pacific and Wabash.

Local traction loans again commanded considerable interest with Interborough 7s advancing 2⅝ points to 7½ and Manhattan first 4s 3¾ points higher to 50¾. Other corporate bonds selling higher on the day included some issues of American Telephone, Santa Fe, B. F. Goodrich, Kansas City Southern, Midvale Steel, Ohio Public Service, Sinclair Oil and Western Union.

Government List Down.

With the exception of the Liberty 3½s, the entire Government list was 1-32d to 11-32ds of a point lower, including Federal Farm Mortgage 3¼s, which yielded 9-32ds to close at 101.18. The new Treasury offering of $150,000,000 in three issues of Home Owners Loan bonds failed to have much influence, marketwise, on the bonds already listed, the 4s declined 4-32ds to 100.6 and the 3s lost 2-32ds at 100.1.

The foreign list was generally quiet. Argentine 6s gained 2⅝ at 78⅞ and German Government 5½s improved to 7½ points to close at 35½. Royal Dutch 4s were a point higher at 136.

Steel Market.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Steel prices per 100 lbs., f. o. b. Pittsburgh:

Blue annealed sheets, hot rolled, 2.00; galvanized sheets, 3.10; black sheets, hot rolled, 2.45. Steel bars, 1.80.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed; Activity Rises

Metals Fail to Improve; Transfers Approximate 125,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Curb Market stocks enjoyed a partial recovery after a flurry of first hour selling, today. Final prices were mixed but generally narrow. Dealings were a bit more active on the selling than on the recovery.

Metals failed to improve appreciably, despite the firmness of that division on the big board. Lake Shore rose 1⅝ points, but New Jersey Zinc dropped a point. Wright Hargeaves and Pioneer Gold were each a shade higher.

Hiram Walker & American Cyanamid "B" recovered from rather sharp early dips to close up net fractions. A few wide losses were suffered in the inactive list. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore finished down 3¼, while Aluminum Co. of America, Singer Manufacturing and Safety Car Heating yielded 1 to 2.

Gulf Oil and Swift & Co. were steady, but small recessions were suffered by Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum, Distiller Corporation-Seagrams and Humble Oil. Dow Chemical firmed 1.

Transfers approximated 125,000 shares compared with 98,000 last Friday.

Wheat Jumps 3¼ Cents to New Highs

Skyrocketing of wheat went nearly 5 cents a bushel, the utmost permissible limit for any 24-hour period, and to more than 34 cents above the season's low point. Reports of sensationally increasing crop damage by drought both in Canadian wheat provinces and the United States corn belt furnished the principal immediate incentive to purchase, together with cables saying European harvest operations pointed to yields considerably smaller than those of last year.

Despite brisk selling to realize profits, wheat closed strong at only a moderate reaction from the day's top, 3¼@4⅛ cents over Saturday's finish; corn, 1¾@2⅛ up; oats, 1⅜@3 cents advanced, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to a rise of 12 cents.

Buying Fever Grows.

Except during an interval of confusion at the outset, evidence of general speculative buying fever as to grains was more pronounced than has been witnessed in a long while.

Initial uncertainty among wheat traders was largely ascribed to holidays at Liverpool and Winnipeg and to transient weakness shown by securities at New York. Unusual irregularity of opening wheat quotations here was such that in different sections of the pit the sales were simultaneously almost 3 cents apart.

Contrasting with temporary weakness of stocks, however, was a steep rise of wheat prices at Rotterdam and Buenos Aires, and the effect of this rise was soon intensified by large purchase orders here attributed to foreign sources.

Following swiftly on the heels of early downturns of Chicago wheat prices came sudden rallies that caused wheat to jump 2 cents in a few minutes, a performance that later was more than outdone twice over.

Rallying power shown by the stock market aided the bulges in grains, but the impetus apparently was by far due more to multitudes of traders who were acting on reports affecting crops alone. Before the day was ended, wheat had mounted to the highest point since July, 1933.

Corn and Oats Up.

Corn and oats derived much of their strength from a report by a leading unofficial authority saying after an 800-mile tour he believed the United States would do well to raise three fourths of the amount of foodstuffs and feedstuffs this year as compared with what was consumed last year.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to action of grains.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Aug. 6.—August production schedules of the automotive industry were estimated at 225,000 passenger cars and trucks by "automotive industries." This represents a decline of about 20 per cent from the indicated July production. In August, last year, production amounted to 243,000 units.

Today's gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank showed imports of $1,669,600 from India. There were no exports. A net gain in the monetary gold stocks of $559,800 was effected through the release of that amount of metal held under earmark for foreign account.

Steel Output Cut 3 Points During Week

Cleveland, Aug. 6.—A net loss of 18 in active blast furnace stacks in July left only 7 in blast August 1 and dropped the daily pig iron making rate 39 per cent, surrendering all of the improvement since the turn of the year, states the magazine Steel.

Since June 1 a total of 43 stacks has been blown out, the 74 now active, comparing with 105 in service a year ago. July's daily rate of 39,630 gross tons contrasts with 64,563 tons in June and 58,108 tons last July. The seven-month total for 1934 is 11,081,152 tons; a year ago it was 6,426,095 tons, and in 1932, 5,734,742 tons.

Meanwhile, production of steel also is moving to lower levels. The National average eased 3 points to 26½ per cent last week when moderate declines in the Pittsburgh, Chicago, eastern Pennsylvania, Wheeling, Cleveland, Birmingham and New England districts were offset only by a shade of improvement at Buffalo and a stationary position at Detroit.

Listless Market.

Five widely-scattered transactions in steel-making scrap—one each at Chicago, Youngstown and Buffalo and two at St. Louis—attracted attention last week in an otherwise listless iron and steel market, for their possible barometric significance. The tonnage was small—probably 30,000 tons—but the sales were made at the market and denoted the first interest by steelmakers in raw materials in some weeks.

These sales strike the keynote of the entire iron and steel market—it is dull but not demoralized. Underneath is a strong sentiment that within 30 days some degree of improvement in buying will set in. By the end of that period, automobile manufacturers should be releasing the first steel required for 1935 models—not in large tonnages but making a start.

The drought last week developed a faint silver lining. For canning meat animals which the Government is now purchasing in the stricken areas of the West, for distribution among those on relief rolls next winter, 175,000 tons of tin plate will be required. A slight fillip was noted in tin plate production last week, traceable to this cause. At Chicago, whose wire works have a big outlet in the farm areas, it is believed that fall purchases will be greater than now seem probable.

Structural steel awards declined last week to 16,134 tons, slightly under the weekly average for the year to date, despite a slightly more active market in New York. Demand for reinforcing bars for bridge work is fair. Labor trouble in oil fields is holding up some plate business at Chicago. Bars are being purchased only for fill-in requirements for automotive and other leading uses.

New Rise Seen.

A seasonal development that may bolster the sheet market is the approach of production on new models of radios. A large manufacturer in the Philadelphia district is expected to buy shortly. New York City supplies the activity in rails, requiring 11,451 tons of these classifications for subways.

Placing of two streamline trains each by the Burlington and Gulf, Mobile & Northern will bring more requirements for light, alloy steels than tonnages for plates.

Prices are generally steady except for a $1 increase in terne plate, restoring its former relationship to black sheets. Steel's revised iron and steel composite, which now includes iron and steel scrap and a larger proportion of finished steel products, stands at $32.28 this week. The finished steel composite is holding at $54, and while the scrap index is off 8 cents to $10.17.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimates steel ingot production during the current week at 25.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 26.1 per cent a week ago and 27.5 per cent a month ago. The current rate is a decrease of three-tenths of a point, or 1.2 per cent.

Partnership Cooperation.

The mark of a good defensive player is his ability to diagnose his partner's intentions and to cooperate in a tacit scheme of defense. The splendid results sometimes reached by the partnership of two strong defensive players make it seem as though they can see through the backs of the cards.

In the deal given below the West player was Norman Bonney, of Boston, and the East player was Geoffrey Mott-Smith, of New York. Considering the fact that duplicate match point scoring was involved, even though the contract was only one heart, the defense achieved a rather notable victory. I wonder how many players in the South seat would have avoided the pitfall so elaborately prepared by the defense!

South, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	Pass (1)	Pass (2)

1—North appears unduly timid in passing the heart bid with such an excellent distributional Takeout.

2—East decides that if West is unwilling or unable to take action over the heart bid, it would be too dangerous for him to reopen the bidding.

Trick 1: West led the Queen of clubs and South won with the ace.

Trick 2: South cashed the diamond Ace.

Trick 3: South led the diamond 4 and finessed the Ten, East winning with the King.

Trick 4: East cashed the spade Ace and West dropped the eight.

Trick 6: West led a spade and East ruffed.

Trick 9: Declarer (unwisely) led a third club and West trumped.

West could see at this point that both East and South must hold four hearts. East could see that West must hold two hearts and two spades. The problem of the defense was how to win two of the last four tricks.

Trick 10: West led the spade Jack since a trump lead would obviously be bad. Dummy, of course, played the heart Ten. East set the stage for the swindle by withholding the Jack and playing instead a small heart. South, of course, under-trumped with the eight.

Trick 11: North led a diamond. East played a small trump, and South, after long consideration, played the heart Queen. West could see that to win with the Ace was futile and therefore dropped his remaining small trump.

Trick 12: The refusal of East to over-ruff Dummy's heart Ten and the failure of West to win the heart Queen presented a convincing reading to South that East's trumps were topped by the Ace and West's by the Jack. The count also showed that West at this point held one trump and one spade and that his presumed Jack was therefore blank. On this reading South had no choice but to lay down the King of hearts. The elaborate obfuscation of Declarer thus netted the defense the last two tricks and set the contract one trick. Admittedly, Declarer could have done better guessing, but the defense, in spite of that, was brilliant Tomorrow's Hand.

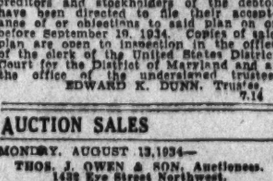
North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Sick Man.

John Calvin suffered all his years, and knew no comfort or repose; he had neuralgia in his ears, and grievous corns upon his toes. He had the quinsy and the flu, he had the ague and the itch, in all the ills the doctors knew, this stricken man was counted rich. There wasn't any punk disease that poor old Calvin didn't own; he had rheumatics in his knees, arthritis made him weep and groan. He took at last a goodly wife, a woman sound and strong and fair, and she proposed to make his life a thing less seasoned with despair. But hardly had she taken hold before she, too, was in her bed; one day she caught a beastly cold, which brought a fever to her head. And from that day until she died she groaned and languished in her pain, and pills and bills were multiplied in hope of healing, but in vain. In Calvin's house there was no fun, there was no rest from bitter pangs; the ailments came not one by one, but came along in rowdy gangs. He had the power of life and death, while pining in his darkened room, and while he choked and gasped for breath, he sent poor mortals to their doom. He stood and watched Servetus burn without a tremor or a blush; he made Geneva's headsman earn his crimson wages, with a rush. So men have said his heart was cold, for mercy it was vain to plead; his methods, harsh and stern and bold, still make men shudder as they read.

Taxi Drivers Harrass Safety Drive Scouts

10 Listed Over Week-End; Accident Fatalities Decline Here.

Taxicabs continued to harass members of the secret "observers'" committee yesterday as Washington's Traffic Safety Campaign entered its third week.

With 272 violations reported since July 22, Sergt. Walter H. Thomas, assistant campaign director, said that 53 infractions have been charged to taxis.

"It is a dangerous situation," Thomas said. "We are seeking a solution, but apparently taxi-drivers have not awakened to our safety drive."

Of 39 violation reports over the week-end, 10 cab drivers were accused of passing stops signs, red lights and reckless driving. A policeman has been stationed at the most frequently violated stop sign, Wisconsin avenue and R street northwest.

Evidence that motorists are rapidly becoming "safety conscious" is shown in traffic bureau records. There has not been a fatal accident since July 17 and only minor injuries have been reported. Collateral posted by violators has fallen 30 per cent.

A pedestrian appealed to the "Voice of Safety" to patrol F street near the Willard Hotel. In a letter to Sergt. Thomas, it was claimed that a pedestrian's only chance to cross the street safely is in the middle of the block.

The "Voice of Safety" automobile, patrolling downtown streets 16 hours each day, will become permanent equipment of the Police Department, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, declared.

Adams Quits Colorado Race for Governorship

His opponents were Miss Josephine Roche and Gov. E. C. Johnson. Adams said his decision was due to the "present situation" which if allowed to continue "will almost certainly cause friction and dissension * * * and considerable disaster to the party in November." The primary will be held September 11.

Uncle Joe Gets His Coon Skin

Everybody knows that Dr. Coon is not the only coon in the world, and everybody knows that there have been lots of coons in the world that are not here now. Men and dogs have killed them. Dr. Coon just happens to be one coon that is wiser than the others, and he knows how to keep people and dogs from killing him; besides, he had Jay Bird to help him to keep out of traps.

Just a few days before the things that you are going to hear about happened. Uncle Joe's dog caught a coon, and Uncle Joe had skinned him and thrown the skin over a clothes line to dry. Jay Bird saw the skin and he told Dr. Coon about it, and asked him if he knew whether the coon was any kin to him.

"I don't think he was any of my folks," said Dr. Coon, "but I am going to make Uncle Joe pay more for the skin than just to skin the coon when the dog brought him in.

"Jay Bird, I wish you would go over to Who-Who Owl's house just before dark and tell him that I want him to fool Uncle Joe's dog just as he did Rover Dog the other night. Tell him to go to Uncle Joe's dog just as he did Rover Dog the other night. Tell him to go to Uncle Joe's tomorrow morning just before day and make that same awful noise out at the lot where the geese sleep, and when the dog comes out after him, to keep him there till he sees that I have had time to get to my tree with the coon skin."

Next morning, just as the chickens were crowing for day, Who-Who swooped down over the flock of geese, and made all the noise he could. The Geese all woke up and began doing the same thing, and so did the dog. He ran out after Who-Who, and he barked almost as loud as Howler ever did, but Who-Who didn't go far away. He kept sailing around and around over the lot where he could see all over the place, and he saw Dr. Coon climb up and up and grab the coon skin and scoot off across the field toward the branch where the great high trees were, and climb up the biggest one in sight.

He watched the Doctor climb up and up till he found a nice thick bunch of little twigs and leaves in the forks of big limbs. He crawled in and hung the tail of the coon skin out so anybody could see it from the ground. Then he crawled off that limb onto another tree and another and another, until he was across the branch before he went down to the ground and back home.

While he was doing all this, Who-Who was keeping the dog running round and round after him, and when he knew that Dr. Coon had had time to get clear away over the branch, he flew right over to where the coon skin had been hanging.

Just as soon as the dog came across the fresh coon tracks, he paid no more attentoin to Who-Who, but put out across the field after the coon tracks. In just a minute or two he got to the tree that Dr. Coon had gone up, and there he stood and barked and barked till Uncle Joe came up with his gun.

By this time it was so light that Uncle Joe could see the big, bushy tail sticking out over the limb. He knew that he could sell the skin of a coon that had no holes in it for a good deal more than one that had been all shot up; so instead of shooting him he went back to the house and got his ax and came back to cut the tree down. It was a good big tree and it took him a good hour to cut it down, and he got mighty hot and tired, but there was that big bushy tail in plain sight, and he knew he was going to have a nice big coon pretty soon. The dog nearly barked his head off, and even Aunt Judy came over to see him catch the coon when the tree fell.

And now it was falling! "Crack-crack-crack-bang!" and it struck the ground with such a loud noise that Mr. Man heard it away over at his house.

By the time the tree hit the ground, the dog was right up in the top where the coon skin was, and he had it in his mouth, shaking it, when Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy got up where he was.

And now I am sure you can just see Uncle Joe with the coon skin he'd caught twice in his hand, scratching his head and walling his eyes around at Aunt Judy, as he said, "Well, if that don't beat all!"

Tobacco is sold in open auctions. We buy the right kinds—mild and ripe—for Chesterfield—and pay the price

..but even that's not all there is to it

AFTER you receive the tobacco from the farmers you have to dry it just right and then store it away for ageing for over two years.

Then you take the different types of home grown and Turkish tobaccos and weld them together in such a way as to make a balanced blend.

The Chesterfield process of blending and cross-blending tobaccos is different from others, and we believe it helps to make a milder and better tasting cigarette.
